

Chapter 0031

With Rick's presence everyone soon loosened up. We played games, danced and drank till our heart's content.

Alpha Izaak retreated to a corner with a glass of drink in his hand as he observed everything.

I occasionally caught him staring at me and he just smiled and raised his glass up.

Clink clink clink

"Everyone gather round," a servant announced. "Cora wants to give a speech," she said. "The floor is yours Cora."

"Thank you," Cora replied, smiling sheepishly, as she moved clumsily to the center. Just looking at her I could tell she was already drunk.

"Thank you so much everyone for making today special," she said with a bow. "Luna Fiona, here's a toast to you," she raised her glass up at me. "For treating my nicely despite our difference in social status, you are now officially my sister!" She screamed, as she walked over to where I was and hugged me tightly. Her breath smelled of so much alcohol.

"How much did you drink Cora?" I mumbled in her ears.

"Not much," she replied with a wide grin. "Alpha Izaak, thank you for gracing this little event with you glorious presence," she said and bowed at him. "But..." she staggered.

"I'm not happy with how you treat Luna Fiona, because of you she's always moody most of the time, and I had to cheer her up."

"Oh my world, Cora what are you doing?" Everyone was scared for her over what she was saying as the whole room became silent. Alpha Izaak just stared at her with a blank expression as he sipped on his drink.

"Rick please do something," I mouthed to Rick.

She staggered towards alpha Izaak and pointed at his face. "Treat Luna Fiona with respect, or else I will...."

"Okay Cora, that's enough, off you go," Rick came to the rescue and took Cora away.

Due to Cora's behavior, the other servants soon left as the atmosphere was a bit uncomfortable. If this was not my room I'd I've left as well. Nobody would like to be a part of whatever wrath will befall Cora from alpha Izaak.

By the time everyone had left it was just me and alpha Izaak in the room, and he was already drunk as he just sat there smiling at me without uttering a word. It was around 11pm in the night, and I just cleared up a few things from my room and left it in the hallway.

"It's time to go go alpha," I went over to where he sat and tried lifting him up.

"Let me stay here," he whined.

"Uh uh, not happening. Up you go," I said, as I tried lifting him up. "Now would be a good time to show up Tris," I mumbled, because of how heavy alpha Izaak was.

After several minutes of dragging and pulling alpha Izaak I finally arrived in his bedroom, it was my first time in his bedroom, the switch were off and I had no idea where they were nor where his bed was, and Tris wasn't coming to help either so I can't use her eyes to see, I was all alone.

I bumped a table with my pinky toe which hurt like crazy as I tried navigating the room, and then we finally arrived at his bed, just as I was going to place him on the bed, he moved around and I hit my toe again, making the Pain hurt twice as much.

I winced in pain and lost my balance as I fell on his bed, and alpha Izaak fell on me.

“Alpha Izaak, please get off me, you are quite heavy” I groaned as I tried to push him off but to no avail.

“Alpha Izaak!” I kept calling but it was as though he had died, he was making no movement, and if I wasn't feeling his heartbeat I would have thought he was dead.
