

Chapter 0037

This is definitely one of his games. Or not.

Jeez. I don't even know what to think anymore. The best option would be playing hard to get. Anyhow things turn out I will be fine in the end.

.....

It was morning already, and I didn't even remember when I drifted off to sleep last night. I woke up feeling extremely hungry, as my stomach growled loudly. I was so lost in thought that I had skipped dinner, Cora would have probably woken me up, but she probably thought I needed rest.

I decided to head to the kitchen to grab a quick bite since Cora hasn't come in yet.

As soon as I reached for the doorknob, the door swung open revealing Cora's ever smiling face. Sometimes I get jealous of her, she has absolutely nothing to worry about, but here I was a huge mess.

"Morning Luna," She greeted with a warm smile. I nodded in response, I didn't have the energy to make small talk, I just needed to put something in my stomach before I pass out from hunger.

I think I need to have a mini fridge in my room, that's full of snacks, Incase of days like this, I wouldn't want to go to the great beyond cause of hunger, that would be such an embarrassing way to die.

"Feeling hungry huh?" Cora asked, like she could read my mind. I was about to answer, before my stomach growled embarrassingly in response. I looked at my stomach and back to Cora with a look that says 'That's your answer.' We both burst out laughing, and for a second I had totally forgotten my worries. I'm grateful for having someone like Cora, I wouldn't even know how I'd survive this pack without her.

"Let me check on the chef and see if your meal is ready. In the meantime, why don't you take a quick shower?" Cora said, chuckling.

"You bet I will," I replied eagerly. Cora turned around to leave, " Thanks Cora," I said.

"For what?" She arched her brows.

I shrugged. "You know..."

"I was just doing my job Luna, and remember we are like sisters," she said, giving me a warm smile.

"Yeah. I know, it's just...." My stomach growled again, interrupting.

Cora gave a half suppressed laugh. "I better get going, by the time you are done with your shower, the meal would be ready in the dining room," She said, and turned around and left.

I closed my door and headed straight to the bathroom, if I waste one more minute I might actually die, literally.

I took the quickest shower I've ever had in my entire existence, and headed straight to the dining.

"Mind if I join you?" Alpha Izaak asked with a smile as he walked over to where I was about to sit. I didn't even hear him come in, I guess I was so preoccupied with devouring the entire meal that I didn't hear him come in.

"Good morning Alpha Izaak," I greeted with a slight bow.

"Morning Luna," he replied with a smile, as he pulled a chair just opposite me. We both ate our food in silence, and I tried avoiding his gaze as I noticed he was staring at me.

"Would you like to assist me with work today?" He asked, breaking the awkward silence.

"Like right after breakfast?" I asked.

"Yes of course, we talked about this yesterday," he replied, staring at me like he was searching my face for answers.

At the mention of yesterday, my cheeks flushed from embarrassment, as the whole kissing scene played in my head again.

"You are my wife, and Luna, so it's only proper that you join me," he said.

"Okay," I replied, and continued eating my meal. it's not like I can say no anyway, I don't really have a say in matters like this.

We continued eating our meal in silence, and when he was done he stood up from his seat.

"Thank you Fiona, I enjoyed breakfast," he said with a smile.

"You are welcome, Alpha," I bowed.

"You have something on your hair," he said, and leaned over and walked his fingers into my hair, as he attempted to remove whatever was on my hair.

Our eyes met, and Cora's words kept ringing in my head 'In order to know if his actions are genuine, don't give in quickly, play hard to get'.

 +25 BONUS

 Comments

 Vote (1.3K)

