

Chapter 0044

"From the looks on your face, I guess he has never treated you that way, right?" Tony said, snapping me back to reality.

I simply ignored him and headed straight for the door.

"Where are you going?" Tony asked, as he stood up from the couch.

"I deserve some explanations!" I snapped, and stormed off.

As I stormed off, on my way to Izaak's room I was greeted by some pack members along the way, but all I did was simply ignore them. Now was not the time for meaningless greetings, I know if they had their way they wouldn't even greet me, so let's just spare each other the hypocrisy.

Arriving at Izaak's room and ready to pour out my anger and frustration on him, his guards told me he was in his study.

I stormed off to his study, and barged in, not minding if he was busy or not, now's not the time for useless curtsies.

"What the hell, Tiana?! Rick's lashed out. "Where's your manners?!"

I rolled my eyes, and paid no attention to him as I tapped my right foot on the floor impatiently , and simply turned my gaze to Izaak who just sat down by his desk without uttering a word.

Well he better , because whatever he says right now would either make or mar him, and I was fully ready either way.

"We need to talk, Izy."

"Izaak you are not just going to ..." Izaak glanced at Rick, shutting him up immediately, and Rick just stormed off.

"What's your problem Tiana?!" Izaak finally said a word as soon as Rick was out ear shot. "What if Fiona comes in?"

I scoffed. "Fiona?" I chuckled. "I don't fucking care!" I yelled.

Izaak stood up, and walked over to me, he attempted to hug me, but I shrugged him off.

"Don't you dare touch me Izy," I warned.

He sighed. "Okay. Can you tell me what I did wrong?"

"You planned a dinner date for Fiona," I said irritably.

"So?" He asked with furrowed brows.

"So? Really, Izy..so?" I shook my head. "You personally saw to the preparations, you've never done something like that for me, and what was that about you apologizing?!"

Izaak was speechless from his facial expression, and it only made me furious. I guess a part of me wanted him to give me a good explanation, but I guess there's none.

"Do you like her Izy?" I demanded. "No scrap that, do you love her?!"

"W-what? Of course not," he retorted. "You know how I feel about you T," he walked over, and took my hand in his as he stoked it gently.

"I don't think so," I said, looking into his blue eyes, and I could see the doubt in them, but my heart was not ready to see it.

"C'mon T," he said, and wrapped his arms around me. Inhaling his scent instantly made my anger subside.

I sighed. "Do you still love me Izy?" I asked. He loosened his arms around me.

"With all of me,T," he assured.

"I believe you," I said, running my hands through his beards.

"Thanks T," he said with a smile. "I assure you it's you I love."

I replied with a smile. "Sorry for barging into your study," I apologized.

"It's okay, you were angry, so it's understandable," he said. "Can you give me a few minutes please?" He requested. "Rick and I were discussing something important before you walked in."

"Sure," I replied, and kissed him.

"Thanks."

I smiled at him, turned around and walked out.

As soon as I was out, I brought out my phone, and ended the recording.

"Now let's go find the Luna."

Chapter 0045

Fiona's pov

I sighed in relief, and leaned on the wall as soon I was out of alpha Izaak's room. My face was still warm from embarrassment as I hurriedly made my way back to my room.

"Luna can I have a moment?" A familiar voice called out to me.

I put on a polite smile, and turned around to see Elder Freya walking towards me. "Yes sure. Good morning."

"Good morning, Luna," she replied coldly.

She gestured for me to follow her to a corner, and I couldn't help but wonder what's making her cold towards me this morning. Its not like we are cool, it's just that it's a bit too early for such coldness.

"Is everything okay, elder Freya?" I asked ,as soon as we stopped by a corner.

"I called you here to prevent problems from happening," she said, ignoring my questions.

"Okay," I said, not really understanding what problems she's referring to. "What can I do to help?" I asked, offering whatever help I can, even though I'm yet to understand what she's on about.

"By working on that mentality of yours," she said harshly.

"Uhhmm, what exactly are you saying?" I asked politely, treading carefully.

"What I'm saying, in essence, is that you should know your place and not cross your limits," she replied harshly. "Just because you're Luna, doesn't mean you can change how things work around here."

"I'm not sure I understand where all this is coming from," I said. "What exactly are you implying, elder Freya?"

"You are not a member of this pack, so you don't really know how things work around here, and I'm just going to let it slide, but don't cross your limits," she said, and walked away.

I was at a loss of words as I watched elder Freya walk away. I don't really know how to react to this, and to make it even worse she practically didn't answer my questions, when I was trying to figure out what's wrong, or what I did wrong.

I just walked back to my room in silence, because whatever thing she has going on, I definitely don't want to be a part of it.

"Good morning Luna," Cora greeted as soon as I was back in my room.

"Morning Cora," I replied.

"Is everything okay? She asked. "Where have you been?"

"I just had a talk with Elder Freya," I replied.

"Alone?" She asked, her face etched with worry, like I had a conversation with the devil herself.

"Yes, why?"

"She's Tiana's grandmother, remember?" Cora whispered.

I arched my brows at her without uttering a word. I don't see how elder Freya being Tiana's grandmother is something to worry about.

Cora went and prepared my bath water for me as she noticed I was not getting the hang of what she meant by her question.

While I was in the bath, I kept trying to reason the meaning of Elder Freya's words this morning.

Oh wait, does this have something to do with the changes I made about the full moon festival? That would probably be it. But why make it an issue now? She never objected to my suggestions then, so why now?

Just as I stepped out of the bathroom to get dressed, I heard a knock on the door, and Cora quickly went to answer it.

"Luna, someone's here to see you," she announced.

My heart skipped a bit at the possibility of it being alpha Izaak. The last time I got a call like this, he was the one kneeling outside with a bouquet of flowers in his hand. The thought of it being him, made me blush.

I got dressed quickly, and headed for the door, only to see Tiana standing by the door with a fake smile. I could tell, because it didn't reach her eyes, and it looked forced.

"Good morning Luna," she said, bowing slightly.

"Morning Tiana, how may I help you?"

"I just came to know how your dinner date went?"

This girl sure is nosy, how does it concern her if my date with Alpha Izaak went well or not. I decided to indulge her, to know what she's got in that twisted mind of hers.

"It went well," I said with a smile. "Why wouldn't it? He's my husband after all."

"Husband?" She scoffed. "I think it's time you get down from that high horse of yours, she said, with a smug expression. "That husband of yours doesn't love you."

"Listen, Tiana, I don't know what your feelings are for alpha Izaak but I suggest you keep them to yourself and I really hope we don't have this conversation again," I said sternly. "You can use..."

"My feelings?" She shook her head. "That's where you are getting things mixed up, it's our feelings, Izaak and me" she said, making emphasis on the word 'our'.

"You sure are delusional," I said in annoyance.

"Delusional?" She laughed again, making me more angry. "If anyone is being delusional here, it's you,". She said poking on my chest.

"Miss Tiana, that's enough," Cora came to my defense.

"How dare such a lowlife like you interrupt my conversation!

" She barked at Cora, glaring daggers at her.

"Tiana, that's enough! I won't..."

"Do you really think he meant what he said, when he asked you to help him become a better alpha," she said, interrupting me. " You sure are stupid, it was all part of his plan."

I was taken aback by Tiana's words, what plan was this insane girl talking about. I need to speak with Alpha Izaak, he has some explaining to do.

I grabbed Tiana by her arm, and was about to drag her out.

She shrugged me off. "You can ask that maid of your's," she said pointing at Cora, who bowed her head down. "She knows about my relationship with Izaak."

"What is she talking about Cora?" I asked, but her eyes remained buried to the ground.

"Just leave Tiana," I ordered pointing at the door.

"But I'm not finished," she said with a smirk.

"I'm not willing to listen to any of your lies, now get lost!" I yelled.

"Lies? Are you that dumb, or just choose to ignore the obvious?" She sneered. "I know you probably plan on confronting Izaak about this, but let me save you the stress," she said, and brought out her phone from her pocket.

She went through it for a few seconds, and played a recording on her phone of Izaak saying he loves her.

I went weak in the knees, and tears threatened to fall, but I blinked a few times, trying hard to prevent it from falling. I can't show I'm hurt, and definitely not in front of this bitch, and Tris was right, Tiana is a conniving bitch.

"No. That's not true," I mumbled to myself reassuringly.

"Not true?" Tiana asked, as she heard what I was mumbling. "The evidence is right here," she said, pointing her phone at me.

"He only loves you as a sister," I said in denial. "That's all there is to it."

Tiana scoffed in disbelief. "Look at the date and time Fiona," she brought her phone closer for me to see the date and time. A part of me wanted to just look away, but another part was curious. I looked at the date, and saw it was today, and the time was just about an hour and thirty minutes ago.

"Well, now you know," she said proudly, and walked out.
