

I Created 300

Chapter 300 300: The Birth Of The Legendary Realm

Simultaneously, Althea was going through a similar transformation. Her connection to Kaelar, the bond they shared, resonated with the energy that flowed from Tornit's remains.

As Kaelar's consciousness expanded and his Core Formation Realm shattered, Althea experienced the same profound shift in her own being. Her spiritual energy surged, and her Core Formation Realm crumbled, releasing a radiant burst of power.

The images of her own battles, her unwavering dedication, and the path she had walked as a cultivator flashed before her, much like Kaelar's experience. She, too, felt that her entire life had led her to this pivotal moment.

As Althea's consciousness delved deep within herself, she connected with the very essence of her existence. Her soul resonated with the potent energy, breaking through the confines of the Core Formation Realm.

Amid the celestial commotion and the triumphant breakthroughs of Kaelar and Althea, a separate series of events unfolded within their respective sects, the Heavenly Sword Sect and the Radiant Holy Lands.

In the distant Radiant Holy Lands, Elara had just arrived at Skyhaven City, leading a group of civilians who had been temporarily evacuated due to the potential danger of the battle between Tornit and the two powerful cultivators. As she oversaw their safe arrival, a sense of responsibility weighed heavily on her shoulders. She was heir to the sect's leadership and had to ensure its safety and continuity.

It was during this critical moment that a message from Althea reached her. As she received the urgent transmission, her expression turned grave. She immediately turned to her fellow geniuses and skilled disciples who had accompanied her.

"Prepare to send word to all the elders and teachers," Elara instructed them, her voice carrying an air of urgency. "Sect Master Althea is undergoing a breakthrough, and we must ensure her protection. This is a pivotal moment for our Radiant Holy Lands."

The geniuses, well aware of the significance of such a message, took her words seriously. Without hesitation, they initiated a communication network that would relay the message to every corner of the Radiant Holy Lands. The word spread like wildfire, and the sect's elders and teachers, along with other powerful cultivators, immediately understood the gravity of the situation.

While the Radiant Holy Lands was in motion to safeguard its leader, a similar scene was unfolding in the Heavenly Sword Sect. Within the sect's grand halls, the Grand Elder was deep in meditation when he received a direct message from Kaelar, the sect's master.

Kaelar's message was brief yet laden with urgency, "Breaking through to the Soul Strengthening Realm. Ensure the sect master's safety."

The Grand Elder, a wise and experienced cultivator, didn't waste a moment. With a solemn expression, he stood up and addressed the senior members of the sect who had gathered for an assembly. He transmitted Kaelar's message to them, and the grand halls buzzed with activity.

"The Sect Master is breaking through to the Soul Strengthening Realm," he announced. "We must ensure his protection during this critical time. Our Heavenly Sword Sect and the world's future is at stake."

The senior members, elders, and teachers of the Heavenly Sword Sect understood the significance of Kaelar's breakthrough. They swiftly organized groups of powerful cultivators to establish defensive measures and protect the sect's leader. Their dedication and efficiency in times of crisis were unwavering.

As the Heavenly Sword Sect and the Radiant Holy Lands went into action, Skyhaven City itself came to life with a sense of urgency. People in the city, both cultivators and ordinary citizens, noticed the sudden flurry of activity.

A peculiar sight caught the attention of everyone in the city. Flying beasts, some never seen before, streaked across the sky with remarkable speed. They were the mounts of cultivators, used for travel and transportation. However, the sheer number of these flying beasts in the sky was unusual.

In hushed tones, people on the streets and in the marketplaces began discussing the phenomenon. They pointed to the flying beasts, awe and curiosity in their voices.

"Look, those must be messengers from the Heavenly Sword Sect and Radiant Holy Lands."

"It seems like something significant is happening. I've never seen so many flying beasts in the sky."

"They say the Heavenly Sword Sect and Radiant Holy Lands are the two strongest sects in the Azure Continent. What could be so urgent that they need to send messages like this?"

"It's a rare sight. Whatever it is, I hope it's not the demons finally making their move to destroy us."

Simultaneously, as Kaelar and Althea embarked on their transformative breakthroughs, the people of the Azure Continent, who had lived perpetually on the edge due to the constant threat of demon invasions, shared their concerns and hopes in hushed dialogues.

In a bustling marketplace in one of the continent's towns, two vendors paused their transactions to discuss the flurry of activity in the skies above.

Vendor A, a middle-aged man with a rugged appearance, pointed upwards, "You see those flying beasts up there? That's a rare sight, even for our Azure Continent. It's as if the very heavens are stirring."

Vendor B, a woman of similar age with a shrewd look, nodded in agreement, "I've heard whispers of trouble. People say the Heavenly Sword Sect and the Radiant Holy Lands are moving in tandem. That can only mean one thing, and it's not good."

In a tranquil park, a group of young cultivators sat beneath a tree, their training interrupted by the unusual sight in the sky.

Cultivator X, a young woman with fierce determination in her eyes, spoke with a hint of concern, "It's not just the sects. The city itself is in an uproar. Something big is happening, but we don't know what."

Cultivator Y, a young man with a calm demeanor, chimed in, "We've always lived on the edge, knowing that demons could strike at any time. But maybe this time, it's different. Maybe... Maybe this time it's different."

As the people of Skyhaven City whispered and pondered the implications of the sudden activity, their attention was soon captured by an awe-inspiring sight.

Just an hour after the urgent messages were sent, Elara, the heiress of the Radiant Holy Lands, and the Grand Elder of the Heavenly Sword Sect arrived at the location where Kaelar and Althea were undergoing their breakthrough. The Grand Elder, known as Elder Jianyu, had a formidable presence that resonated with wisdom and power.

Elara and Elder Jianyu approached the location where Kaelar and Althea were wrapped in a state of profound cultivation. The two cultivators were surrounded by an aura that pulsed with energy, making it evident that their breakthroughs were still in progress.

When Elara greeted Elder Jianyu, her voice carried both urgency and anticipation. "Greetings Grand Elder Jianyu, I'm relieved to see you here. This is a moment of great significance. Sect master Kaelar and sect master Althea are on the cusp of a legendary breakthrough."

Elder Jianyu, with his piercing gaze, nodded in agreement. "Indeed, Lady Elara. The fate of our Azure Continent may hinge on this very moment. Let us bear witness to the birth of legends."

The arrival of Elara and Elder Jianyu added to the charged atmosphere around Kaelar and Althea. The excitement was palpable, and the significance of this moment hung in the air like an unspoken promise.