Chapter 501

With that, they both fell silent.

"Big Dipper's branch in Southeast Aelinne is also in trouble,' Draxton said.

Isabella's expression froze.

And then, all was silent again.

"I have to make a trip down to Southeast Aelinne myself."

'You'll have to go and see for yourself."

A moment later, the two of them spoke. And it was at the same time.

The two of them met each other's eyes and smiled.

Draxton lowered his head to look at Isabella's stomach, then said, "I thought that since I missed Ricky and Betty's birth, I could stay by your side through the entire time until this one comes along."

Isabella caressed her stomach and said softly, "There's no need to make things so difficult for yourself. Now, things are not the same as in the past. You may be leaving for now, but I know you will return to my side soon enough. At the very least, you will be here with me when this child is born."

Draxton did not say anything. Instead, he went forward and gently pulled her into his arms.

It was a warm hug. There was nothing ambiguous about the feelings they had for each other then. It was only warmth.

"You must be more careful. We know nothing about Southeast Aelinne. I'm not even sure if this is a setup to lead you past, or something else." Isabella said worriedly.

If she were not pregnant at this time, without question, she would make the trip with Draxton.

However, she had to be very careful now that she was carrying a child.

Draxton's eyes looked slightly cold as he said, "Don't worry. I, Draxton Lockwood, will only die of old age, and I will only die for my wife and children. Everyone else can forget about messing with my life!"

Isabella's eyes were slightly red, but the corners of her lips curled up slightly into a small smile. She stood on her tiptoes and wrapped her arms around the man's neck. Then she gently kissed him on the forehead.

And then, Isabelle said, "These are the most heart-touching words of love someone has ever said to me.

"What are you talking about?" Isaac pulled out his gun and tossed it aside while walking toward the black suits.

Harry did likewise.

The leader in the black suit sneered and said, "Drop the pretense, Isaac Taylor. You dared to lie to Mr. Lockwood. It seems the Barker family's eldest daughter is indeed capable. She charmed you to the point of you falling head over heels for her and defying Mr. Lockwood's order!"

Isaac kept a straight face. But in his heart, he knew he could not hide it anymore. Mr. Lockwood was aware of everything. There had to be a spy planted around him. It was just that he did not know who that person was.

The only consolation now was that Yvette managed to leave before these men arrived. As long as she returned home, the Barker family would notice something was amiss if anything happened to him. They would see to it that Yvette was well-protected.

Isaac closed his eyes to hide all the emotions that his eyes threatened to betray and give him away.

Perhaps, they were just not fated to be together.

No, from the beginning, their love had been a mistake.

Things were better this way. If he died, Yvette would be able to return to the way her life should be. After some mourning, she could find a young man of compatible family background and status. She could get married, start a family and live happily.

Thinking of this, he found himself slowly relaxing.

On The other side, a heavy-hearted Yvette could feel something weighing on her mind.

She knew something was wrong with Isaac. Something was very wrong.

Something that she was unaware of happened.

Yvette's eyes were reddening as she drove. She kept asking herself if she had brought him trouble because of her persistent pestering.

She stepped on the accelerator to beat the red light. Right now, she was desperate to get home.

She would tell her family about her worries when she reached home. They would help her analyze the situation and think of a solution. If something were to happen to Isaac, they were the only ones who could save him.

Yvette knew very well that the only thing she could do was seek help from her family.

She drove very quickly and drove up onto the viaduct. An SUV was moving towards her. The other party was also driving at high speed. In the blink of an eye, it quickly closed in on her.

Blood painted Yvette's face red, and she looked horrifying.

Isaac's face instantly changed. Shock filled his eyes, and the expression on his face quickly turned ferocious and ruthless. However, almost immediately, he let out a smile.

"Mr. Lockwood, what do you want from me? Didn't you say I will benefit much by getting close to her? I did as you said. So what upsets you?"

Isaac looked at Mr. Lockwood.

Mr. Lockwood narrowed his eyes and scrutinized Isaac. He exhaled a puff of smoke from the cigar in his mouth and sighed. "Isaac, oh Isaac. Do you know how outrageous you look at this very moment? I don't even dare to spare your life even if I very much wanted to."

As he spoke, his expression darkened slightly.

Immediately, two men in black suits stepped forward. One of them shot Isaac right in the calf without a second thought.

Isaac instantly fell to one knee on the ground.

Yvette could not help but shout, "Isaac!"

Isaac cast one look at Yvette. Then, he lowered his eyes to look at his calf. There was a clear hole the bullet created where blood was oozing out.

He shook his head at Yvette.

Tears fell from Yvette's eyes in continuous streams, meeting the blood all over her face. The two looked at each other silently.

Upon arriving at Sapphire Club, Stanton took the lead and barged his way in.

When Mr, Lockwood saw Stanton, he could not help but clap and laugh.

"Mr. Barker, did I not make myself clear? The person I want is Isabella Thompson. Why are you here instead? Are you here to meet your Maker?"

Stanton's gaze swept across Yvette's face. When he saw what a wreck she was, his face turned black.

Next, he saw Isaac at the side. Once again, there was a subtle change in his expression. He then looked at Henderson and said, "Mr. Henderson Lockwood, don't you think it's despicable to do something like that?"

Henderson shook his head, then said, "Since it's a way of getting what I want, is there a need for you to categorize it as noble or despicable?"

Mr. Barker, you cannot be thinking that you can rescue the lady with these bodyguards, can you?

"Let me repeat for your benefit. Bring Isabella Thompson to me in exchange for Yvette Barker. There is no room for negotiation!" As Henderson spoke, he looked to one of his men and said, "Go, chop off one of Miss Barker's hands now!"

Someone immediately went over to Yvette Barker.

"Stop!" Isaac shouted angrily. He attempted to pounce over, but someone immediately stopped him by clasp his arms behind his back.

Stanton Barker shouted angrily, "Get moving!"

Without further ado, Stanton and his bodyguards charged at the other party.

The two groups immediately started fighting.

It was unquestionable that Stanton Barker was at the losing end.

Stanton was a businessman who did not have much experience in fights. Amidst the chaos, someone bumped into him, causing him to fall hard on his bum onto the ground.

He looked up with an awful expression and glared at Henderson. At the same time, he was hoping that the bodyguard who went to get more help would hurry up.

Chapter 505

Henderson was taken aback by the question.

He did indeed think she was easy to deal with. Why else would he dare to make a move on her?

Although she was known as the Miraculous Doctor, she still had to surrender in the face of absolute force, right?

That's why he dared to do it!

When he learned that Draxton Lockwood had gone to Southeast Aelinne, he immediately began to plan how to deal with Isabella.

After Draxton shot him, Henderson could not retaliate against Draxton for the time being. Naturally, Isabella Thompson was next on his hit list.

He was even aware that Isabella was Butterfly. Before, even the most formidable assassin would be no match for her. But now that she was pregnant and her strength had significantly diminished, he was completely confident that he could take her down.

But...

How could he forget that Isabella was skilled in bug poison crafting?

No, even if he had remembered, he never would have imagined that Isabella would put up such a big fight!

Henderson was filled with regret, and now the only thing he could do was beg for mercy.

These bugs were so damn scary.

He swore that as long as he could survive today, he would never provoke Isabella Thompson again in his life. He would even go out of his way to avoid her if they crossed paths!

Heck, he would just avoid all bugs from now on!

Henderson had always thought of himself as a tough guy. He believed that even if someone held a knife to him and threatened to chop him to pieces, he would not flinch an inch.

However, in the face of so many insects, he melted down!

He really broke down.

Because he started crying.

Isabella looked at him in surprise. For a moment, she could not say anything threatening.

She scratched her head in dissatisfaction. "Why are you crying? Do you feel ashamed?"

Henderson trembled uncontrollably while staring at her in horror. He stammered, "Yes, yes, I am an embarrassment. I know I was wrong, Miss Thompson. Please make them all go away!"

Isabella Thompson looked around at the swarm of insects and said, "What's the rush?"

Isabella walked up towards the second floor resolutely.

She went up the stairs and walked into the private room where Harlow was. Standing by the open window, she looked down and saw Harlow wildly flailing his hands, shouting as he removed his clothes and pulled on his hair.

It wasn't until he had stripped himself bare and pulled out several handfuls of hair that he was finally sure that there were no more bugs on him, did he feel relieved.

Isabella silently watched the naked back run away and thought to herself, "What could make a gang leader disregard his image and run naked with hands still ruffling through his hair?"

These were her adorable and invincible bugs!

Isabella walked down the stairs emotionlessly.

She snapped her fingers as she descended.

Immediately, the swarm of bugs and the bugs wrapped around everyone's bodies began to retreat.

Henderson regained consciousness at this moment and saw that there were no more bugs on his body. He was delighted but suddenly remembered something and let out a dry heave.

He lifted his hand to touch his nose but didn't have the courage to.

Although the bugs had retreated, there was one bug left on everyone's body. Henderson stared in horror as that bug eventually wriggled into their nostrils.

He couldn't help but remember his previous experience.

Thus, Henderson fainted again.

Isabella scowled at the thought of how utterly worthless he was. Wasn't he supposed to be some big shot?

"Get up, you're the mighty head of the Vernon Group, and this is the so-called 'courage' you have?" Isabella said with disdain.

She kicked Henderson in an acupoint that would have woken him up even if he didn't want to.

Tears streamed down his face as Henderson cried, "Miss Thompson, please, I will not do it again. Can you please get the worm out? Will it devour my brain?"

Philip took Isabella back home while Stanton went straight to the hospital.

Although Yvette and Isaac looked severely injured, they had only sustained superficial wounds.

By the time Stanton arrived, Yvette's wounds had already been stitched up and bandaged.

The bullet in Isaac's leg had also been removed and was being cleaned.

As soon as Isaac saw Stanton, he tensed up involuntarily.

Stanton ignored him and went straight to Yvette.

'Does it hurt, sweetheart?' Stanton asked in a gentle voice.

'No, it doesn't,' Yvette replied while looking over worriedly at Isaac.

Stanton was unhappy as he felt like his own daughter always cared for that fool and didn't take him, her own father, seriously.

"Look at all these bandages on you. How can you still say it doesn't hurt?" Stanton rebuked.

Yvette replied, "The anaesthesia hasn't worn off yet, so even with all these bandages, my wounds don't hurt."

Stanton was momentarily speechless.

He glared fiercely at his useless daughter, feeling that she was too quick to undermine him. She even talked back to him while her eyes seemed to be glued to that fool.

Irritated, Stanton stood up and walked directly to Isaac.

Isaac was usually a fierce fighter who feared none. But at that instant, he gulped nervously and was stuck like a statue.

Stanton said contemptuously, "You'd better take good care of your leg. If you end up being disabled, you can only dream of being with my daughter then. Do you hear me?"

After his monologue, he turned and left with gusto.

Isaac was dumbfounded.

His eyes met Yvette, and asked, "Yvette, what did Mr. Barker mean just now?"

The chartered plane was flying directly to Dawton City and was due to arrive soon. However, the plane suddenly experienced violent turbulence.

With a loud bang, everyone in the cabin was thrown off balance.

Isabella and Jeanne protected the two children while Philip got up to check the situation.

In the cockpit, the mood was somber. When the two pilots saw Philip come in, one of them exclaimed, "Sir, it's an attack!"

Philip turned pale when he saw through the surveillance camera that the plane's tail wing was on fire.

In the distance, several helicopters were aiming shells at them.

The fact that their tail wing was on fire meant they couldn't continue flying under any circumstances.

'Sir, we have no choice but to make a landing. As it happens, there is a civilian parking lot below.'

Philip narrowed his eyes and said, 'This coincidental?'

The captain was stunned for a moment before he reacted. What were the chances of this happening?

The other party was forcing them to land.

Philip's expression was grave. "Let's land first."

As the plane descended onto the parking space, the armed helicopters hovering in the distance flew over with several gun barrels pointed at them.

A heavily armed team disembarked from one of the helicopters. When Isabella and the others got off the plane, they saw the armed personnel charging in their direction.

At the same time, rounds of smoke bombs were ejected from the gun barrels above.

When the smoke bombs exploded at ground level, even Isabella couldn't help but inhale a decent amount of smoke.

Suddenly, a darkness overtook them, and they had no time to react. They lost consciousness in an instant.

Isabella regained consciousness, a musty and damp smell lingered in her nose, along with

They looked thin, but their exposed arms were quite strong. Their muscle lines were smooth, revealing they were strong.

They were not tall, but their eyes shot a sharp and fierce light. Those terrifying gazes swept across the group of women as if they were frightful demons.

They did not have a strong interest in women. It was probably because they had done this type of business for a long time. They communicated in the local language, pointing at everyone.

They were speaking Vikerish. Isabella heard them mention the Andrews family and even mentioned Harlow Andrews.

The Andrews Family was prestigious in Viker, having incredible power locally.

It seemed the Andrews Family must have something to do with this human trafficking.

However, this was not the most important news that Isabella had heard. These people probably thought Isabella and others did not understand the local language, so they did not hide anything. Therefore, Isabella heard an essential term, “headman”.

From those people’s talking, Isabella discovered that the headman should be a powerful organization’s chief. Others addressed that person as “headman” out of respect. As for the name of the headman, they did not mention it. They did not even dare to talk about the name of the mysterious organization.

One of them said, “These three women should have decent backgrounds. It’s not easy to sell them. Master asked us to give them to the headman. Only the headman, who is like God, is worthy of playing with such women.”

As the person spoke, he pointed at Keiko, Zoey, and Ellen.

Isabella immediately understood, thinking, “These people seem to know nothing about me. I don’t know how I ended up in the hands of these people after I fainted.

Isabella did not worry about Philip, Jeanne, and the kids. The President would challenge the Lockwood family if he decided to attack Isabella. It would be a direct declaration of war if the President dared to attack Philip and the others.

The three girls’ faces immediately changed when noticing those men were pointing at them. Ellen was the calmest and boldest one usually. However, Ellen could not help but panic when she saw those men walking toward her.

When Isabella went to take a shower, she looked around the bathroom. She was relieved when she did not find any surveillance cameras. Isabella thought, "Fortunately, those people are not that perverted." However, those people came in again when Isabella was showering. They had some clothes in their hands.

They were surprised when hearing the sound of water in the bathroom. One of them raised his eyebrows with interest and whistled.

The sound of water kept going. However, Isabella did hear the noise outside. Not long after, she heard footsteps approaching.

Isabella narrowed her eyes and fixed her gaze on the bathroom mirror.

Isabella saw her calm and sharp gaze in the mirror.

Isabella thought, "If necessary, I will break the mirror to have a handy weapon.'

Isabella had to use the mirror as her weapon because all her weapons, poisons, and even the gadgets to keep bugs were gone after she woke up. Those men must check Isabella and have taken everything away.

The metal pendant around Isabella's neck and the golden butterfly studs on her earlobes were also gone.

This was what made Isabella depressed. Otherwise, she would have been able to contact Draxton.

Isabella held the showerhead in her hand, thinking, "I might break the mirror to attack them if they dare to break in.'

The footsteps stopped outside.

Megan's voice arose. She said, "Ganyra Josephina, put your clothes out. They want to throw our clothes away.'

Isabella paused and looked at the clothes she had taken off.

A moment later, Isabella opened the door and handed the clothes out through the small gap.

Many stains were on Isabella's clothes, and they smelled awful. Isabella did not know what she had experienced when she was unconscious. Megan took Isabella's clothes and left.
