

Chapter 89

"Hahaha, tell me, how would Mr. Zabinski look at us?"

"During the day of graduation, there were Rolls-Royce and sports cars, and even a helicopter. But in the end, he was just a property agent. Hahaha!"

The room echoed with laughter. There were six people, including Whitney, two boys, and four girls, all of whom were Robert's classmates. Meanwhile, Whitney's boyfriend left.

After receiving the call to attend Whitney's party, Robert finished up the project schedule before heading over to her house.

It was already seven o'clock when he reached Whitney's house.

"Sorry, I'm late." Robert came in and immediately apologized.

The room was filled with his former classmates, so there was a sense of familiarity in him.

"Robert, what are you so busy with?" a female classmate teased deliberately.

Robert smiled and replied, "There were some projects that were not done well. So I'm working on those right now."

"Projects?" The six people in the room stared at each other and burst into laughter after hearing Robert's words.

"Project! Hahaha! Robert, you're so funny!"

"Interesting. Very interesting!"

"As expected from Mr. Zabinski!"

Some of them continued to mock Robert by calling him the heir of the Zabinski family.

Robert listened to them laugh, shrouded with confusion.

"All right, have a seat," Whitney said. It wasn't that she was trying to change the subject, but rather that she wanted Robert to sit tight and to further interrogate him.

Robert smiled and sat on the sofa.

"Robert, you made quite a scene on the day of graduation! You've really surprised us!" a male classmate said, his tone dripping with sarcasm.

Robert donned a bitter smile. "My father prepared all of these without me knowing. To be honest, I was also startled."

"Robert, what does your father do?" a female classmate asked while deliberately putting on a jealous expression.

After doing this, she looked at the person beside her and gave a sly wink, as if asking whether she had performed well.

These people had no direct interest in Robert. The reason for their behavior was purely driven by human nature.

The flame of jealousy burned within them. After learning that they were jealous of nothing but a facade, they were thrilled. Only by stepping on the person they previously envied could they feel satisfied.

Robert explained with a smile, "The Zabinski Group in Yrinas is owned by our family."

There was nothing to hide about this.

Chapter 89

"Wow, the Zabinski Group! Such a large-scale company! But Robert, why did I hear that you're selling properties in the sales gallery?" a female student asked, as she couldn't stand the act put on by Robert anymore.

"Oh, about that," Robert waved his hand and said. "The previous employees all failed to meet the standards so I fired them all and took over it myself. But now, I've let someone else take over."

"Really?" Whitney found the sloppy excuse made by Robert hard to believe. She walked over slowly and said, "Robert, since your family is so wealthy, the house you live in must be quite grand. How does it compare to mine?"

After saying that, Whitney twirled and felt like she was a princess living in a castle.

The five other classmates also looked at Robert like he was some kind of joke.

Send Gift

Comment