

Last Days 146

Chapter 146 Warehouse Supplies

It didn't take long for them to clean up these magic beasts.

Riya put the few magic beasts' corpses into her world and sent one of them to the white tiger. The white tiger was still very weak and only by eating more magic beasts would it be possible for the white tiger to grow.

So for now, Riya would feed it with more magic beasts.

For now, the unranked ones.

Slash!

Samuel came while dragging a magic beasts. The skin of the magic beasts flickered and seemed to blend with the ground from time to time. If one had to say, it looked strange.

"Even after death, it's still invisible?" One of the military soldiers asked as he stepped forward to check the magic beast.

"The skin had mutated because of mana, so they could create perfect camouflage." Samuel smiled faintly. "Too bad, they're inherently weak and could only use sneak attack to kill their target and devour their opponent. This is one of the few magic beasts that could grow faster through consuming other magic beasts."

Hearing this, the soldiers shivered.

Riya nodded.

Some magic beasts could grow quickly if they ate other magic beasts. But at the same time, there were also many magic beasts that would not use this method and instead ate other resources.

The problem is...

The current Green Planet had only started to recover mana, so there were not many food that they could eat.

'Perhaps there's a place where they can eat and not hunt humans?'

In that world, there were some places that had the highest concentration of magic beasts and humans didn't dare to come. Because those magic beasts didn't attack humans and only attack other magic beasts. Their main food was the grasses in that area.

Riya thought for a moment before shaking her head.

There was no point for her to think about this.

She couldn't make those places and it was also highly impossible for her to think about making one with her current situation.

"Alright, let's hurry to the next warehouse."

"Yes."

Samuel handed the corpse to the soldiers responsible to pick it up and started to walk away. He passed a look at Riya and saw that she was still calm and composed even if they were surrounded by the magic beasts.

However, Riya didn't make a move to help.

After a look, Samuel didn't bother with Riya anymore.

They filled all the trucks they brought with medicine from these warehouses. Looking at the broken temperature system, the soldiers sighed deeply. It was clear that the current situation was not very good. If they had come any later, many of these medicines couldn't be used anymore.

After all, some medicines required them to keep it in relatively cool place. The hot temperature in the entire world had caused many people to have heatstroke.

Could these medicine preserve their effectivity in such a situation?

It was doubtful.

Thankfully, they were not too late.

While these soldiers were cleaning up these magic beasts, Riya also sneaked away a few times to kill a few more magic beasts for the white tiger.

In her separate space, the white tiger looked at the pile of magic beasts corpse in front of him, dumbfounded. The stack alone was higher than his entire body. Eating one was already difficult and now Riya gave five directly.

She told him that he had to eat a lot.

At this moment, the white tiger felt that it would be overfed rather than starving when staying around Riya.

"Brother, it's getting late. Are we departing now?" Amelia asked as she looked at the sky. It seemed that the current situation was not very good. If it was dark, they wouldn't be able to fight these magic beasts properly.

"Yes." Samuel also looked up and said, "It's better to go today than staying outside."

"This...." Amelia had already recovered most of her mana, but she didn't really want to travel at night. She didn't have any night vision and if she were to be surrounded by these magic beasts, she could only cry.

Because she couldn't beat them at all.

"Are you afraid?" Sean taunted.

"I'm not!" Amelia immediately retorted.

"Then just follow the order." Sean rolled his eyes. He felt that there was nothing that they have to worry about. Even if a powerful magic warrior came up, there was still Samuel who could deal with it.

"Fine." Amelia huffed.

Arnold looked at the two of them quarreling and chuckled. "They never stop, huh?"

"They're noisy." Samuel rolled his eyes and beckoned the others to start moving. Even if he didn't mind them going at night, it would be better for them not go back too late at night.

"Yes!"

They started moving the car again but since they had to take another route to go back to their previous road, they might have to clean up a few more roads.

Before they could go far, a large number of magic beasts had appeared.

"Another horde?" Amelia's expression tightened.

"They might have been attracted by the gunshots." Samuel frowned and quickly reached for the radio and gave order for the military to prepare for a breakthrough.

"No. There's a small crack," Riya said and looked at the ruined building not far from them. She could faintly see that there was a small crack there and her eyes narrowed. That crack seemed as if it had been dug up by these magic beasts rather than formed by the earthquake before.

But there was no evidence that said the cracks had to be big.

Riya had seen a few cracks but there had to be hundreds or even thousands of them in the entire world. It would have been impossible for her to know the standard size and appearance for these cracks.

"Damn. What should we do?" Amelia was stunned. If there was a crack, doesn't it mean that these magic beasts would be endless? Can they get out at that time?
