

Last Days 200

Chapter 200 Teaching

Riya explained very clearly that Amelia was able to use the magic spell after an hour of practice.

This made Amelia very excited and ran to test on the meat that had been prepared. She also planned to call her mother later to let her see her new skills.

"I'm going to try first!"

Riya laughed when she saw Amelia's action and then turned her head and saw Samuel standing there, looking at her with a calm look. She arched her eyebrows in question when she saw his gaze.

To be honest, Riya had sensed Samuel's presence when she was explaining things to Amelia, but she was too lazy to pay attention to him.

Anyway, he didn't really do anything and Riya was didn't want to pay attention to him.

"Do you not mind if she taught that magic spell to others?" Samuel asked when he saw Riya wanted to ignore him. This made Samuel felt rather helpless but there was also nothing that he could do.

Who made him offend this young lady first?

It was obvious that Riya would choose to ignore him when he was around her and had no official business.

"It's fine," Riya replied. "That magic spell is just a first rank magic spell. Besides, if more people could learn it, they could also get stronger faster to deal with those magic beasts out there."

If Riya had to say, she didn't care too much whether other people were strong or not. But if these people could hold on and take care of these magic beasts out there, there would be more people who survived.

They should also be better prepared for what was about to come.

In this way, Riya didn't have to be the one to stand on the limelight and deal with those magic beasts alone.

Because Riya felt that she was not suitable for such a work. She would rather work in the shadow and get stronger for herself.

"I didn't expect you to be so selfless." Samuel's eyes deepened. "Do you want to contribute the magic spell to the Martial Arts Association? I'm sure that the Martial Arts Association will help you to provide things that you need in exchange."

When he exchanged things with the Martial Arts Association, they had agreed that they would put priority to what he needed.

The problem is, what Samuel needed were mostly precious things.

So Peter always felt like scolding Samuel so badly.

But they still agreed because most of the magic spells known by Samuel were really strong. And with his background, he knew a lot of lower ranked training method that was suitable to be spread to many people.

They could only agree.

Samuel thought about this and choose to suggest this matter to Riya.

"I thought you're about to suggest the Magic Association." Riya smiled faintly.

"After they try to kill us?" Samuel's lips twitched. "I would rather support the idiot Peter in the Martial Arts Association rather than supporting that lunatic Murin."

Riya nodded when she heard this.

Murin's reputation in that world... was indeed not very good. The fact that he was the enemy of many people and died even earlier than Riya had already shown how many people who hated him.

But it was that world.

In this world, there were very few people who knew about Murin.

And his profession as beast master meant that there would be many magic beasts standing up to protect him in the future. It would be a hassle to eliminate Murin when he had truly grown up.

But coming to kill him now was also an impossible task.

That Flute of Beast alone could make many people cower in fear.

Riya and Samuel also didn't have any good idea to deal with that Flute of Beast with their current strength.

Destroy it?

If an artifact of that rank could be destroyed so easily, it would not be called an artifact. Snatching it was also impossible because as long as Murin is alive, that artifact would be bound to him for life.

Dealing with him had to be done later when they have prepared enough.

"Fair enough," Riya replied and then corrected her seating position. She looked at Samuel thoughtfully and then asked, "Are there any alchemist's pills or magic tools in the Martial Arts Association?"

Samuel: "..."

He looked at Riya speechlessly.

Did she think that it was so easy for the Martial Arts Association to poach people?

Moreover, people with such high talent might not necessarily fancy the Martial Arts Association. Those who had experienced the same thing as him was even more so unwilling to join the association.

If they could, they would be like Riya and roamed free on their own.

Those of the same background as Samuel would rather rely on their background and ability to make a name for themselves.

What was the point of joining the Martial Arts Association?

As for people like Peter...

Well, it was hard to say and there were not many people who would be willing to work for the official for their entire life. From what Samuel knew, Peter had to work under the arrangement of the officials and so on.

For Samuel who prefer freedom, such a life was a big no for him.

But for Peter who needed a lot of resources, it was the best method for him to obtain it without the need to worry so much about his life.

"No."

Riya looked at Samuel speechlessly. "What did you ask from them in the first place?"

Samuel didn't answer and looked at Riya with a blank look.

What he wanted was a promise for them to help him find the resources he needed first if there was a chance in the future.

Riya: "..."

Alright, she understood the answer from his look.

And after Riya thought for a few seconds, she silently took out a piece of paper and started drawing there and recorded the few things one had to pay attention when using the spell. It was not very detailed but enough for most people to understand.

"Here you go."
