Chapter 120

Although Phoebe's shoes weren't particularly high, she was naturally beautiful and tall, and even a slight height difference was enough to display her charm in a captivating way, causing Jack's heart to involuntarily race.

With her already stunning looks and gentle smile, she appeared even more graceful and noble.

When Phoebe saw the stunned look in Jack's eyes, her face flushed slightly. She parted her red lips, revealing an enchanting curve as she asked, "Jack, do you have some free time? I've already reported your name to the radio station. The student council would like to arrange an interview for you."

Jack suddenly remembered that the university was recruiting male broadcasters and was slightly surprised. "Do I still need to do an interview?"

Phoebe, thinking Jack might be reluctant, gently bit her red lip. Her tone became somewhat cautious as she asked, "It's just a simple interview... Are you unwilling?"

"Well, alright."

Although Jack hesitated a bit, he worried that Phoebe might think he lacked confidence. Besides, working with her at the radio station was something he had always dreamed of.

"Let's go then!" Upon hearing Jack's agreement, Phoebe's face lit up with joy. Just as they were about to leave, there was another knock on the door.

"Come in," Jack said.

The door opened gently, and a bald, chubby man walked in. After scanning the room, he greeted Jack enthusiastically, "Excuse me, what's your name?"

Jack had never seen this person before, so he asked, a bit confused, "Who are you?"

"I'm Felix Chambers from Starlight Entertainment. I'd like to ask if Luca is staying in this dorm? The one who won the championship in the Calisota Youth Vocal Showcase." Felix said, handing over a business card.

Jack and Phoebe both looked at each other in surprise. This man was actually the General Manager of Starlight Entertainment?

Starlight Entertainment was a renowned company in the domestic entertainment industry, known for signing countless music talents and superstars.

They never imagined that such a big player in the industry was already paying attention to Luca.

"Yes, he stays in this dorm. But he's not here right now," Jack answered.

The strength of Starlight Entertainment couldn't be underestimated. If Luca could sign with such a company, it would undoubtedly be a huge boost to his future career.

"Well, I'll wait for him then," Felix said as he began to look around the dorm.

He first asked about Luca's desk, but then stopped in front of Jack's desk, staring at it.

"Excuse me, whose desk is this?"

Felix seemed particularly interested in Jack's desk.

"Is there something wrong?" Jack asked, not directly answering that it was his desk.

But Felix quickly guessed it from Jack's tone and expression. "Is this your desk?" When Jack didn't respond, Felix's eyes lit up with a strange delight.

He took a piece of paper out of his pocket, seemed to confirm something, and then extended both hands to shake Jack's, his tone becoming more excited.

"Nice to meet you! I've been looking for you everywhere, Mr. Soul!"
