Limits 149

Chapter 149

Night quietly fell over Eirene Music Academy. Streetlights flickered on, illuminating the campus in a warm glow.

For this concert, the campus had pulled out all the stops. The roads were lined with festive decorations, lanterns swayed in the evening breeze, and excitement buzzed through the air.

An hour before showtime, the entire campus was already packed.

Thousands of people filled every corner-students from nearby universities, fans from across the country, and even those without tickets who had come just for the atmosphere, hoping to catch a glimpse of their favorite stars.

Outside the sports arena, massive banners of the performing artists were displayed.

But without a doubt, the biggest and most eye-catching poster belonged to Soul.

His stardom had reached a new level. Even though the poster only showed his silhouetted back, people still stopped in awe, taking pictures, some even posing next to it like they were meeting a legend.

The streets leading to the stadium had transformed into a makeshift marketplace, with students seizing the opportunity to sell all kinds of merch-glow sticks, posters, light-up headbands, and collectible memorabilia.

After rehearsals, Jack declined Starlight Entertainment's invitation to dine with the VIPs and instead opted for a quiet meal at Eirene Music Academy's cafeteria. With less than an hour before the concert, he wandered around the campus. Eirene Music Academy wasn't as large as Alnewgo University, but it had a refined, artistic charm. The pathways were lined with tall trees, small scenic lakes dotted the campus, and every corner exuded a sense of creativity and passion.

But the most striking part of the walk was the sheer number of stunning women. Jack had to admit the students here had insanely high standards of beauty. As he took in the scenery, his gaze landed on a small group standing on the library steps—a few men and women, clearly waiting for someone.

At first, he only noticed them because they were all ridiculously good-looking.

Then, he spotted someone familiar.

It was Feena.

Jack blinked. They had just seen each other earlier, and now, here she was again, right in the middle of Alnewgo University's campus.

But what really caught his attention was the guy standing next to her, Seth.

Jack's expression subtly darkened.

Seth was a snake, through and through. Back in Perthter City, the guy had already shown his true colors, and later, he had even set up Luca just to save himself.

And now he was still hanging around Feena?

Jack quickly brushed off the irritation.

After all, Feena and Seth were both students under Donald, making them senior and junior classmates. It made sense that they would attend the concert together.

Still, Jack had no interest in small talk, so he decided to walk away without saying anything.

But just as he turned to leave, Feena's voice rang out behind him. "Jack? Is that you?"

He turned around, seeing the hint of surprise in her eyes. She looked genuinely pleased to run into him.

Since she had already called out, ignoring her wasn't an option. Jack smiled and walked over.

"Feena. Didn't think I'd run into you again so soon."

She folded her arms, tilting her head slightly. "You came all the way to my school and didn't even text me? Shouldn't I have been your tour guide?"

There was a playful hint of complaint in her tone, but more than anything, her expression showed that she was seeing him in a new light.

Especially after everything that had happened earlier, she was starting to realize that the guy she had once overlooked had far more layers than she had ever imagined.