Chapter 163

The students knew nothing about Felix, but the security guards worked for the organizers. They knew very well who Felix was.

The plump security guard immediately saluted respectfully and greeted, "Good day, Mr. Chambers!"

That was enough to tell the students that Felix wasn't a regular Joe. They started whispering among themselves as they asked their friends who Felix was.

Soon, someone recognized him. They answered in a hushed voice, "That's Felix Chambers, the general manager of Starlight Entertainment! He's the organizer for the All-Star Concert."

"What? Are you sure you have the right guy?"

"I'm positive. My dad had the honor of having a meal with him once. It's definitely him!"

Even Leila was respectful to Felix. After all, he was the general manager of one of the nation's top entertainment companies-many of Eirene Music Academy's students would end up working for him in the future.

The student's words and the respectful looks on the student council members' faces made everyone else settle down. No one dared doubt Felix's identity anymore.

When they saw him greeting Jack so respectfully, it was clear enough who the latter was. The crowd couldn't think of any other possibility-he had to be Soul.

After all, Soul was the only person who could make the general manager of Starlight Entertainment humble himself and act so ingratiatingly.

"Is he really Soul?"

"It is him!"

"Oh, my goodness! The truth is out!"

"I can't believe we were so close to Soul! We had no idea!"

Feena didn't speak. Her lips were parted slightly in shock, and she stared at Jack in disbelief. It seemed she still couldn't accept his true identity. Still, it didn't matter whether or not she believed it. That wouldn't change the truth.

Suddenly, she felt like she was only just starting to understand Jack, a person she'd known and had lived in the same neighborhood with for years.

He looked unaffected, but his features seemed more gentle, and his eyes seemed brighter under the lights. There was something attractive and charming about him when paired with his tall stature.

Amelia was equally stunned by this revelation. Her heart raced, and her limbs went numb. Everything had happened so suddenly; this was beyond her imagination.

Alex and his two friends stood there stiffly. Their arrogance had disappeared the moment Jack's identity had been revealed. Fear filled their eyes.

Ultimately, they were just regular students. Perhaps they could be obnoxious toward their fellow students, but they were nothing more than pests when facing someone of renown.

Silence descended upon the crowd once Jack got into a Mercedes-Benz and left. The students who'd wanted autographs or photos forgot their objectives-they watched dazedly as Jack was taken away.

Perhaps it was the shock of the revelation of Jack's identity or the astonishment of learning what he was capable of-they forgot to do anything.

The plump security guard was the first to snap to his senses. His expression shifted, and he waved his baton before pointing it at Alex. "You're coming to the security room with me."

Leila stuck her hands on her hips and glared at Alex. "You're the one who tried to attack my idol, aren't you? You've got some nerve, coming to our university to stir up trouble. Come to the security room with us!"

The student council members hurriedly surrounded him, not wanting to give him the chance to escape.
