Chapter 196

This was especially so with Jack's deep and mesmerizing gaze, which made a few of the women's hearts skip a beat.

Amelia and Queenie, along with a few other waitresses, naturally noticed Jack as well.

"Sir, would you like me to pour you a drink?"

Just as Jack was thinking about how to integrate himself into this circle, a gentle voice sounded near his ears.

He turned and saw a beautiful woman in uniform holding a bottle of red wine. She was looking at him carefully.

Jack realized that his glass was indeed empty, so he smiled and replied, "Yes. Thank you."

Then, he handed his glass to the woman.

Perhaps even Jack himself didn't know how charming his smile and gentle gaze was at that moment.

The woman's heart skipped a bit. Her cheeks flushed, and her hand that was holding the wine bottle trembled slightly.

"Be careful," Jack gently reminded her as he helped her to steady the bottle and pour the wine into his glass.

Then, the woman, who was blushing furiously, fled the scene like a startled deer.

"Madison, why did you come back so suddenly?" a few waitresses asked curiously as they surrounded Madison Brook.

They had all been watching expectantly to see how Madison would seduce the good-looking businessman, but they didn't expect her to run back in a panic.

Madison was too embarrassed to say that she had been flustered and charmed by Jack and that she had run back because she was afraid to make a fool of herself.

It was only when she was up close to Jack that she felt the unforgettable and unexplainable charm in his smile. She even began to wonder if she had fallen in love at first sight because of that smile.

Not too far away, Amelia and Queenie also saw Jack. However, they couldn't approach him due to the working rules.

They were very surprised to see Jack in the banquet hall. Although they had seen him at the entrance of the building earlier, they had thought that he was just going for a job interview somewhere else in the building.

Jack's sudden appearance at the summit completely proved their previous assumptions wrong.

"Maybe he's just here to look for someone..." Amelia guessed.

They didn't think that Jack was a waiter. After all, they knew almost all the waiters working there that day.

Queenie tucked a strand of hair behind her ear and said to Madison, "You have to be careful. Not every handsome guy is a rich man. Do you know who he is?"

Madison and the others shook their heads as they didn't know the answer.

Queenie smiled arrogantly. "If I were to say that he's actually a broke nobody who has sneaked in here for free food and drinks, would you believe me?"

Madison and the other women showed expressions of disbelief. After all, with Jack's outfit, appearance, and temperament, he didn't seem like the kind of person that Queenie was describing.

Queenie chuckled. "Even if you don't believe me, Amelia knows it better than anyone else. In fact, he's even pursued her before! But luckily, she turned him down."

Madison and the others turned to look at Amelia. When she didn't say anything, they thought that she was silently agreeing with her words.

At that moment, a few of the women who had been hopeful showed disappointed expressions, and they lost interest in Jack.

After all, Jack was the most handsome person in the entire hall. But it turned out that he wasn't a wealthy heir and was just a poor loser instead. This was disappointing indeed.
