Chapter 199

Jack had some drinks and was heading to the restroom when he unexpectedly bumped into Amelia.

When their eyes met, Jack frowned slightly. He wanted to pretend he didn't see her, but Amelia smiled and greeted him first, "Hi, Jack!"

Since she had taken the initiative to greet him, Jack had no reason to be cold toward her. So, he nodded and said, "Hey."

A trace of sadness flickered across Amelia's face. She didn't expect Jack to respond so coldly. This made her feel very distant from him. She even thought that if she hadn't taken the initiative to greet him, Jack might have pretended not to see her.

Ever since she took Raina's advice and distanced herself from Jack, the distance between them had grown farther and farther. The distance between them now was so vast that everytime she thought about it, she felt suffocated.

The atmosphere became awkward. Jack didn't want to continue the conversation with Amelia. He planned to just leave, as he felt uncomfortable staying with her for even a second longer.

However, Amelia didn't want to end the conversation there. When she saw that Jack was about to leave, she quickly said, "Jack, I didn't expect to run into you here!"

Amelia was a little surprised.

After all, the event today was an elite IT summit organized by the municipal government of Alnewgo. The attendees were either renowned entrepreneurs or wealthy investors, as well as high-level advisors and their assistants. In short, everyone there had an outstanding status.

Even people like Amelia and Queenie, who were doing quite well in a prestigious university, could only stand at the entrance to welcome the guests at such an event. And even that was envied by many of their peers. After all, they could get close to countless influential figures this way.

The reporters, hotel staff, and security personnel were also essential. Although Amelia had considered that Jack might have sneaked in, that seemed unlikely due to the tight security at the venue.

However, Jack's attire and demeanor didn't seem to resemble those of a security guard. So, what was he doing here?

Jack smiled casually and said, "I'm here to meet a friend."

Amelia nodded slightly, guessing that Jack might have used his connections with an influential figure to experience this grand event. After all, everyone wanted to broaden their horizons.

She didn't associate Jack with the influential figures, but she also didn't look down on him. After all, he had once been famous in the music industry as "Soul". Even though he had since had a downfall and even been slandered and defamed, his unparalleled talent couldn't be erased.

She recalled the time when Jack had performed spectacularly at Eirene Music Academy in a mask and how his songs had taken the internet by storm. He was also adored by countless fans.

In fact, as a student in the School of Music, Amelia had also been one of Soul's fans. If she weren't, she wouldn't have almost had a falling out with Alex over a concert ticket back then.

This was Amelia's first time talking to Jack after finding out his true identity.

Looking at the guy who had once been so close to her, she noticed that there was no hint of despair on his face even after losing everything. Instead, he exuded a confident and charming demeanor.

Amelia felt slightly relieved, and she said softly, "Jack, your music is amazing. I really like your songs."

Jack immediately knew what Amelia meant, so he nodded and smiled. "Thank you, but that's all in the past."

But Amelia shook her head and said, "I know you, and I believe that you didn't do those terrible things you've been accused of. I also believe that you can get through this and come back stronger."
