Limits 210

Chapter 210

Ryan desired that through Drakengard Games, he could share the company's bonus from the rapid development.

Most importantly, he hoped that the partnership with Drakengard Games would again win over the market's recognition. After all, partnering with a celebrity company that everyone had eyes on was the best publicity. This would tell everyone that Ellen Games was worth something. Even Drakengard Games was partnering with Ellen Games; there was nothing to worry about.

As they said-one wouldn't strike a smiling face. Receiving Ryan's warmth, Patrick naturally responded with a smile. "Ellen Games' reputation precedes you. I consider it a blessing to meet you today, Mr. Carter."

Then, Ryan eagerly introduced Patrick to Eric, who had not gone far, as well as Thomas and Mia. "This is the CEO of Drakengard Games, Mr. Patrick Hamilton, whom I've mentioned before. He is full of potential and has accomplished so much at a young age! Mr. Hamilton is bound to leave a bold and unforgettable legacy in our country's online gaming industry."

With Ryan's introduction, Patrick smiled and greeted everyone.

The people around Ryan-Thomas, Mia, Feena, and the rest-looked at Patrick's youthful face and how everyone seemed to revolve around him. They couldn't help but admire him. Although they didn't know Patrick very well, they were familiar with Drakengard Games and the online games they developed.

The games, including "Panzer Saga", had long become a nationwide sensation. Everyone knew these games. Even if one did not play, they would know someone who did.

Who would have thought the company's CEO, who owned such a sensational game, was this young and full of potential?

People said beauty was drawn to talent and potential.

At this moment, all the ladies gazed at Patrick with admiration. Amelia, Mia, Feena, and even the female servers on the premises couldn't help but look at Patrick with adoration.

Although there were many greater business tycoons than Patrick in the vicinity, they were mostly in their forties to fifties. But compared to them, Patrick's sheer youth alone was an overwhelming advantage.

Patrick's charm, money, and confidence had undoubtedly caught their fascination.

Some daring ladies even started strategizing how to interact with Patrick, finding ways to sell themselves to him. After all, if they could forge a relationship with such a charming, talented, and wealthy man, they would be set for life.

After getting to know each other, Matthew seized the opportunity and suggested, "Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Carter is very confident toward Drakengard Games' potential. He hopes to invest and develop with us. Are you interested in giving Ellen Games a chance?"

Ryan anxiously looked at Patrick, fearing that he would reject his proposition.

After all, the partnership with Drakengard Games was of immense significance to Ellen Games and could determine whether it lived or died.

Thomas and Mia anxiously gazed at Patrick, hoping Patrick would give Ellen Games a chance.

When Patrick looked at Mia, she seized the opportunity and sneakily shot a charming glance at him. After all, shooting charming glances at someone didn't take much. Doing it to Jonathan was no different from doing it to Patrick. As long as she could catch hold of either of them, for Mia, it was a deal with guaranteed returns.

However, Mia was left disappointed. Patrick was unbothered by this attempt from a person like her.

After all, Mia was mediocre in the looks department.

However, they were left disappointed. Patrick did not immediately provide a definite answer.

Patrick's gaze was suddenly drawn somewhere else. Then, he said with a huge smile, "I'm sorry, Mr. Carter. I can't give you a definite answer at the moment. I need to discuss this with my partner because he's the real decision maker of Drakengard Games."

In fact, Patrick had noticed Jack's presence.