Chapter 288

After all, Luna had heard that the Bentley was paid for in full by a mysterious buyer, and Jack didn't seem like someone who had that ability.

Gigi and Remy also looked at Jack nervously, waiting for his response.

"It's mine." Jack hesitated for a moment before finally deciding to be honest. It seemed pointless to lie or hide it.

Hearing this, the three girls' hearts skipped a beat, and their expressions changed.

Jack had to admit that he felt a little proud at that moment. No matter how much he tried to keep a low-profile, he still had emotions and desires to show off.

Luna, Remy, and Gigi didn't say anything, but they muttered in their heart, "So... the car really is his!"

Before this, they had assumed Jack had just rented the car to show off at school, but his confession shattered their assumption.

Moreover, looking at how smoothly Jack opened the car door, and there was no one on the driver's seat, it was enough to prove that Jack had been telling the truth at that moment.

Thinking about the huge contrast between Jack's previous image and his current striking image, Luna wanted to mock him out of habit. But just as she was about to, she found she no longer had the confidence to do so.

Finally, Luna smiled and pretended to speak casually, "Wow, I guess I really made a mistake. I had no idea you were hiding so much or that you really own a luxury car like this. I really am quite surprised."

Remy, sounding a little jealous, added, "You've never shocked us like this before."

However, Remy had always suspected Jack wasn't as simple as he seemed, so her reaction was relatively calm.

After having a short conversation, Jack and Bella got into the car and drove off. The tires crushed the snow on the ground, leaving deep tracks behind.

As they drove away in the Bentley, Luna could no longer pretend to be composed and indifferent. Her expression instantly darkened, and she felt as if she had been struck by lightning.

Just then, her phone rang. A man's voice came from the other end of the line. "Luna, where are you? Have you eaten? Let me take you out for a meal!"

It was Patrick, who had bought a new car with Jack.

Luna answered coldly, "I'm with my friends. What do you want?"

Her tone was cold. It was no longer as enthusiastic as before.

"Perfect. I can pick you all up for dinner. A fancy new BBQ place called Hans just opened near campus. We can eat there, and I'll bring you to buy and customize your Swarovski necklace!

But Luna's tone suddenly became impatient. "Patrick, I just realized you're so immature!"

Patrick was stunned. "Luna, what do you mean?"

He was confused, uncertain of how he had suddenly offended her.

Luna continued to say furiously, "Let me tell you something, Patrick. The money you're spending isn't even yours. It's investments you got from other companies, not for you to spend impulsively. Do you think you'll appear superior by just buying a necklace? You're still that pathetic, poor man deep down. Don't expect to change your status just by buying some cheap car with the investment money."

The other end of the line was silent. Patrick was probably shocked by Luna's sudden outburst. He would never know that he was simply bearing the anger that was originally directed at Jack.

Luna hung up, but her mood remained horrible.

At that moment, Remy cautiously asked, "Luna, so... are we still going to eat?"

"No. I'm not in the mood now. I just want to sleep. If you want to go, just go without me."

Luna's attitude was extremely bad now, completely different from before. She left without even taking her books, appearing very determined.
