Limits 297

Chapter 297

The next day, Jack didn't go to the lecture in school and asked Samuel to help report his attendance. He was busy refining the characters and scenes in Legend of the West, while the novel continued to be loved by the readers. It wasn't until 5 p.m. that he finally stretched himself and wanted to go out for some fresh air.

At that moment, the campus broadcast was about to start, and Jack walked to the radio station after some thoughts.

When Jack reached the radio station, Phoebe was sitting there staring blankly at her phone. She seemed to be lost in thoughts.

When Jack appeared at the door, Phoebe quickly put her phone down, and a dazzling smile appeared on her stunning face. She greeted him just like usual, "You're here?"

"I'm here!"

So, Phoebe nodded and said gently, "Then let's prepare our content for later!" They started their daily half an hour broadcast. Today, they were prepared to perform Timeless Years again at the request of a listener.

After working together for so long, they had developed great teamwork.

With what had happened before, their performance of Timeless Years had reached a whole new level. Phoebe's emotional expression when she was playing the piano had touched Jack's heart deeply. Although he knew that he shouldn't have any feelings for her, he couldn't suppress his emotions.

After the broadcast, Phoebe smiled gently at Jack.

That smile was as warm as a gentle spring breeze, spreading warmth in his heart. Jack warned himself to control his emotions, but his longing for Phoebe only grew stronger.

Jack realized that men would always be attracted to something new. Although he already had someone perfect, he was still tempted by what he didn't have. However, at that moment, he only wanted to cherish every moment spent with Phoebe.

After the broadcast, Jack was planning to meet Charlotte to learn Spanish.

But just as he was about to make a move, footsteps suddenly echoed from outside the door. A strikingly good-looking man walked in right after.

At the sight of him, Phoebe instantly blushed, and she asked gently, "Why are you here?"

Jack recognized the guy. He was the one who had previously acted intimate with Phoebe downstairs.

Jack guessed that he was Phoebe's real boyfriend. At that thought, Jack's expression darkened.

The tall guy glanced at Jack. It was not a hostile look but a meaningful one. He didn't say much and just smiled at Phoebe gently. "Phoebe, are you done with your work? Let's go for dinner together if you're done."

From Jack's perspective, the guy seemed to not see Jack as a real rival, which made him feel rather awkward.

Phoebe nodded and held the guy's arm as they left after waving goodbye to Jack.

Jack watched as Phoebe walked away with the guy. He put aside his disappointment and gave Phoebe a call.

Jack had initially planned to eat with Bella. But Bella had gone shopping with her roommates as she didn't have class this afternoon.

On the other hand, Bella hung up the call and dragged Gigi into a men's clothing store.

Bella began to choose carefully, occasionally asking Gigi for her opinion, just to pick an outfit that would suit Jack best.

Ever since she confirmed her relationship with Jack, all Bella had been thinking was him. Her classmates had said that she was love-brained, but Bella didn't deny it.