Chapter 66

The students from the School of Finance were utterly disappointed. A few of them even started leaving because they didn't want to witness the humiliating defeat.

In fact, Jordan looked the most upset. At first, he had high hopes for Joshua. Yet, the latter had performed badly in this match. This was an utter humiliation!

Thus, Jordan decided to throw the last quarter and remove the starting players from the court. He prepared to discipline them later on.

Just then, Oliver approached him with a smile. "Hey! Are you asking your main players to leave now?"

Jordan looked very upset and pointedly ignored Oliver, who added, "I thought you said there was an ace player on your team. So? Is this the extent of his skills?"

Evidently, Jordan was being mocked by Oliver, which disgusted him greatly. Yet, he knew that the members of his team were worse than those on Oliver's team.

In the end, Jordan replied, "Don't be too smug. The real ace on our team is sitting on the bench! You'd better have all your star players step up their game."

However, he didn't have another ace. This was just a ploy to tire out the members of the School of Music.

Alas, Oliver didn't believe Jordan's words because he had seen through his tricks. Once the basketball team from the School of Finance surrendered, Flynn and the others could wash up and rest.

After realizing the situations of both teams, the audience began leaving the place.

Many female students came to see handsome men, so there was no point in watching the match anymore.

Luna looked at her watch and stood up. She asked Bella, "Now that Flynn has left, the match won't be interesting anymore. My boyfriend from Granada has sent me a Skarovsvi Brilliant Necklace. Do you want to pick it up with me?"

The remaining girls prepared to leave.

Since Bella lost interest in the competition, she stood up and prepared to leave too.

As she walked past Jack, she glared at him angrily.

She thought, "Hmph! What a country bumpkin. He always takes a passive approach to things."

Soon after, half the audience had left. However, Phoebe, who was part of the cheerleading team, stayed in her seat.

She looked at Jack. It seemed like she wanted to ask him why he didn't participate in the match.

Jordan prepared to leave as well.

Suddenly, Jack, who was sitting on the substitute bench, stood up and said, "Mr. Huntington, I want to compete in the match."

Jordan was still furious. He looked at Jack disdainfully and asked, "Do you think you deserve to compete in this game? Why? Do you think you'll be able to catch up with the other team?"

Jack replied calmly, "I think I could give it a try."

Everyone around them almost burst into laughter. They felt that he was just being shameless.

Jordan glared at Jack and said, "Are you still dreaming? If you win the competition, I'll ask you to be my mentor!"

Then, he tried to push the latter away. However, since Jack was too tall, Jordan couldn't make him budge and almost fell instead.

Suddenly, a nice scent wafted in the air. Phoebe stood beside Jack and told Jordan, "Mr. Huntington, maybe you could let Jack give it a try. His basketball skills are admirable."

Since Phoebe was the campus belle of Alnewgo University in her freshman year, Jordan knew who she was. As such, he gave a nod of agreement.

"Let him play."

After all, they had lost the competition, so it didn't matter even if a weak teammate joined the game at that point.
