Chapter 68

The situation of the match had changed in just one minute. The gap between both teams shrank from 23 points to a mere 6 points. This sudden change was unbelievable!

At that moment, Oliver was very agitated. He furiously cursed to himself, his voice trembling.

As expected, Jordan didn't play by the rules. He thought that Joshua was the ace of that team. Unbeknownst to him, the real ace was actually Jack!

Oliver stared at Jack, who displayed his extraordinary skills of quick steals, elegant dunks, and accurate three-pointers.

The former noticed that there was a gap in capabilities between his team's substitute players and Jack, so he became fearful.

He wondered, "Should I get my main players to enter the field again? Wait! Calm down! There is still a difference in scores at the moment."

However, Jack's performance stole the attention of many. Once again, he managed to snatch the ball from the other team and work with his teammates to score a goal.

The audience cheered enthusiastically.

Jack skillfully blocked his opponent's shot. Then, he leaped in the air, the basketball in his hand appearing to be very small comparatively. His agility was beyond shocking. He jumped so high that his head almost hit the net!

He didn't just deflect the ball-he was practically grabbing the basketball from the backboard!

Meanwhile, the player whose dunk he deflected looked bitter. He thought, "What the heck? His jumping skills are very impressive! Why is he participating in a college competition? He should be playing professionally instead!"

"Isn't he bullying us?"

"Quick! You must stop him!"

On the other hand, Oliver broke into a cold sweat. He cursed Jordan internally, "Is he really a freshman player?

"He's way more talented than a professional basketball player!" As he stared at the decreasing point difference between the two teams, Oliver knew that if this continued, his team would be defeated.

Yet, at that moment, the main players of the School Of Music were humming to themselves in the gym showers.

Since they thought that they would definitely win, they showered in peace. In fact, they had already started washing their basketball jerseys.

However, a sudden news disrupted the peaceful atmosphere.

"What? We're almost at a tie?" Flynn exclaimed.

"Yes! Hurry up, or our faculty will soon lose," the person who broke the news said.

Immediately, everyone panicked and wore the clothes that they had been washing. In fact, someone put on their underwear even before washing off the soap still on it.

The water dripped from his clothes as he staggered forward.

Once they reached the court, the players stared at the scoreboard in horror. The score was currently at 72 and 78 in the School of Music's favor.

There were only five minutes left in the match.

Jack practically bridged the gap in scores between the two teams in five minutes.

Everyone looked at Oliver, who was staring at Jack's splendid performance in sheer terror.

He had already forgotten about his main players. The image of Jack soaring through the air was the only thing that remained in his brain.

Oliver was determined to recruit Jack into his team by all means! The latter was a talented sportsman.

Just then, a strong desire overtook Oliver.

Since he was passionate about recruiting talented basketball players into his team, Jack was like a brilliant treasure to him.

Even though Jack was Jordan's ace, Oliver knew that he had to recruit Jack, no matter what.

Everybody stared wide-eyed as Jack displayed his brilliant skills. Though three basketball players from the School of Music surrounded him, he did an amazing slam dunk, scoring a foul in the process.

This made the audience erupt into earth-shattering cheers.

Jack's performance was swift and extraordinary. His capabilities impressed everyone. Then, everyone started chanting "MVP" in unison. Their cheers were so loud that they shook the entire stadium.
