Chapter 74

Jack said cheerfully, "You're pretty brave. You brought a bunch of gangsters to fight me."

He wasn't one to be trifled with. After learning that Hank was the culprit, Jack called Caspian Reed and the others to deal with Hank and his men.

Though Hank wanted to escape, he was held in place by Caspian.

"Get in the car!" Caspian barked as he dragged him into the van.

Soon, a subordinate installed a spare steering wheel and drove them to a desolate area.

As the surroundings became more barren, Hank was so scared that he stammered, "W-Where are you bringing me to?"

Caspian slapped him immediately, breaking his teeth in the process. When Francesco saw that, he was so scared that he wet himself.

In the end, the vehicle stopped near a reservoir. Hank and Francesco were thrown out of the vehicle.

Jack pointed at Francesco and said, "Caspian, break this guy's legs first!"

When Caspian hit Francesco's legs ruthlessly with a stick, the latter screamed in pain, and his bones shattered. From the sheer force

Evidently, Caspian was setting an example for Hank.

The tactic seemed to work because Hank was scared witless. "Please don't kill me! Someone ordered me to do this."

Jack asked in a low voice, "Who made you do this?"

Hank replied in fear, "Flynn!"

So, that bastard was the culprit! Jack then asked, "Where is he?"

"He's in room 508 at Thompson Hospital."

To survive, Hank exposed Flynn without a second thought.

Jack nodded, a glint appearing in his eyes. "Very good."

After that, he motioned to Caspian, who threw Hank and Francesco into the reservoir, leaving them to their fates.

Elsewhere, Flynn never expected Hank to betray him.

Once everything was settled at the abandoned reservoir, Jack and Caspian drove to the hospital.

A random deliveryman appeared in the crowded hospital and told the receptionist,

"I have a delivery for the patient in room 508."

The nurse who was working nodded slightly. After the deliveryman left, she muttered, "That hooligan in room 508 is so annoying. He chased the other patients out of his room and kept gambling and smoking there."

"Yes, what a rascal."

Once Jack heard that, he gave Caspian a meaningful look. The latter understood what he wanted immediately and said, "We're Flynn's friends. Let us send the food to him!"

The nurse nodded without looking at Jack. She was under the impression that Flynn's friends were hooligans too.

After that, she saw Jack standing near the elevator and holding up the food containers with a smile. "It's dinner time. Let's eat before getting to work."

As such, the group of people sat near the elevators and started eating.

Flynn's food was pretty good. There were meat skewers and even a few bottles of beer and soft drinks inside.

Once everyone was done eating, Jack waved and declared, "Let's go!"

A few subordinates swiftly held the bottles of beer in their hands.

After arriving at room 508, they saw two gangsters squatting outside the room while playing poker cards.

Caspian walked over and said, "Your food has arrived. It's too much so we can't carry them ourselves. Help us bring the food up."

The two of them dumbly followed him into the elevator.

Soon after, a few agonized screams were heard behind the closed doors.

Once they dealt with the subordinates, Jack motioned for Caspian to knock on the door. Immediately, Flynn roared, "Fuck! Who's banging on the door again?"
