

Lord of War 17

Chapter 17: .Mystery Swordsmanship

Sean, who successfully transferred his job, couldn't wait to open his attribute panel, and saw that the [Mercenary] originally displayed in the combat class has now been replaced with [Warrior], and the class level has become one again. The only thing that remains unchanged is that the 13 proficiency points are still displayed there. These are exactly the same as the original situation in the game.

But Sean quickly noticed a difference.

[Warrior (second-tier class): This is not a noble class worthy of praise. Although you rush faster than anyone in every battle, it is not called bravery in many people's eyes, but stupid. Of course, you have to believe that there are still many people in this world who appreciate your courage, such as the place where the big guys gather in the Brothers House. Perhaps when you decide not to be a fighter anymore, you should be able to be a bodybuilder with your muscles—provided that you still have a whole place in your body.]

[Inauguration Reward-Enduring Combat: Your bravery makes you rush to the forefront every time you fight, but not all enemies can be solved by you at once. Sometimes you even need to repeat the process of trial and entanglement, too many times After that, you also learned how to retain your stamina to cope with more such battles (the stamina decline rate is reduced by 30% during combat); combat experience: after each battle, you will reflect on the mistakes of the previous battle, because of this A serious attitude of continuous hard work and study makes your fighting awareness become more and more acute (strength +4, strength limit +5, endurance +3, endurance limit +5, agility +2, agility limit +4, wisdom limit + 2. Will +1, Will limit +4)]

[Inauguration Punishment—Spell Trouble: You only focus on strength training and development, and you think men should speak with their fists, but in fact the damage from the spellcasting class is much greater than you think (magic damage increase)]

He remembered that in the game, the professional punishment for warriors was supposed to be a decrease in magic defense by 20 points, but now it has become an increase in magic damage. But after thinking about it carefully, Xiao En understood: After all, what he is in now is a real world, and there is no so-called system calculation formula here, so the data that needs formula calculation naturally disappears.

However, Sean is not interested in trying to see how far this so-called magical damage increase has been.

He moved his gaze to the column of personal attributes.

Strength: 12+3 (14); Endurance: 12+1 (15); Agility: 11 (14); Wisdom: 10 (13); Will: 10 (14)

Breath out gently, all the situation is not much different from the original game.

Although the "battle experience" in the inaugural bonus has added attributes, in fact this attribute value is the total attribute value added after the occupation level reaches the full level. In the game, the highest level of each class is ten, so the attribute value of "strength limit +5" will be added after [Warrior] reaches level ten, like now it only has one level, the attribute increase is actually only 0.5 That's it, but because the game did not display the value after the decimal point at the beginning, the actual attribute is "14" instead of "14.5", but the power that should be increased will not change because of this.

clenched his hands and relaxed a little, Sean was already in a more optimistic attitude about this trip. All he had to do next was to allocate his skills well, so that there would be no problem in crossing the black soil.

But when Sean opened the skill panel to allocate proficiency points to learn new skills, he was stunned.

At this moment, on the nearly dim skill panel of Sean, there are nearly ten skills showing a light gray brightness, which means that these can be activated and used as long as they are invested in proficiency points. However, Sean did not look at these skills, but stared at the last skill, the expression on his face mixed with disbelief and excitement.

That is a passive skill.

【Mystery Swordsmanship: When using any sword weapon, strength +2, agility +2.
Swordsmanship special sword, level 110, proficiency 03. 】

There are many different passive skills in "Miracle", which can be obtained through other different methods in addition to those obtained through career rewards. And the most popular ones are undoubtedly the passive skills of weapons. For example, passive skills such as swordsmanship can be improved in attributes after being equipped with sword weapons. However, ordinary swordsmanship has stricter requirements for sword weapons. Such as requiring the equipment of thin swords, epees, long swords and so on.

But there are exceptions to everything.

Mystery Swordsmanship is a passive skill that Sean had obtained only after desperately working hard for all swordsmanship. For this skill, he even wasted half a year to do a series of extremely tedious tasks. This is not only because of the powerful utility of this passive skill, the most important thing is that it is also a prerequisite for the learning of several powerful swordsmanship skills, and is even related to a special advanced class.

It's just that Xiao En remembered that this should be a skill that can only be learned and mastered at Tier 4. Why can it be activated now?

But this thought just flashed in his mind, and then Sean ignored it completely and chose to activate the skill directly.

【It takes ten proficiency points to activate this skill. Are you sure to activate it? 】

Shaun was taken aback.

Ten o'clock?

What's the situation?

It only requires two proficiency points to activate a special first-level skill, and only five proficiency points are required to activate a fourth-level special skill. And this skill actually needs ten points, which is the proficiency point needed to activate a ninth-order special skill!

However, Sean was just stunned for a moment. As the saying goes, he is reluctant to bear the children and can't hold the wolf. If you consider the player's thinking, the more skill points you need to consume, the stronger the skills will naturally be. So there was no hesitation and entanglement at all, Xiao En chose yes, and then he felt that some memory seemed to be awakened in his mind, and a strange force instantly flowed to his limbs.

Just holding the sword, he already felt that he seemed to have a strange connection with the sword in his hand, and his aura completely changed.

The guard who was chatting with Sean looked at Sean dumbfounded. The look on his face suddenly changed from astonishment to surprise. He trembled and said: "This momentum...you...you, you actually changed your job? possible!"

Xiao En smiled shyly: "I'm not very clear, but after hearing the stories of the past, I was looking forward to it, and then suddenly realized that he was already a soldier."

The transfer of ranks all have a standard degree of judgment. Basically, people on the Miracle Continent can only be considered successful after passing judgments from various guilds and mentors, and can obtain relevant information from other people. The only conditions for employment are the players. And once he succeeds in taking up a higher job, the aura that he exudes will also change as a result. This is also the reason why this guard will find that Sean has successfully changed his job to a fighter.

It's just that he can't understand at all. Why is Sean able to change jobs so easily? Is it really because of the so-called genius?

Of course, Sean will not explain this point, anyway, it is useless to explain. And out of a certain sense of shock and awe, the guard did not continue to say anything to Sean, which made Sean happy. When it came time for the rotation, Old Peter and others were naturally equally surprised by Sean's transformation, but they didn't ask much. Sean became stronger, which is naturally very beneficial to their team.

The night was very peaceful.

The next day, although they were astonished at Sean's transfer, everyone was happy, because it meant that the team had one point more chance of winning through the black soil. After simply eating some meat, everyone in the team set off again. In the forest where the time is completely unknown, there is no way to distinguish between day and night. At the beginning, everyone can calculate the time, but experience After the attack of the wolves, the time has been lost.

The only thing that can be used to determine the situation is the bright moon in the night sky.

Looking at the moon getting rounder and rounder, and it was already reddening at the edge of the moon, Sean knew that the magic wave was coming soon, so he didn't dare to delay any more, but started to drive with all his strength. So unconsciously, the team's forward speed increased again, but this time they never encountered any skeletons along the way. This made everyone feel a little surprised and relaxed. After all, they were so surprised. Surrounding multiple skeletons is not an easy task.

It's just that everyone doesn't know that Sean's view of the black soil here in the Forest of Starfall is just like in his back garden. He already knew how to avoid these bones. I didn't do this before, purely to gain experience points, but now that there are not many experience points to attack these first-order skeletons, Sean will of course not waste time.

I took a few breaks in the middle, and it was probably the past two days based on time.

The team finally came to a place that seemed to be a camp.

The construction of this camp is very atmospheric. At the entrance of the camp, there are two stone towers about five meters high with complicated textures painted on them. Judging from these texture styles, everyone can conclude that these are two magic towers. And what was built around the two magic towers was not a simple facility such as a wooden fence, but a thick stone wall. Judging from the smoothness of the stone wall, it was obviously built with magical power.

In the camp, all the buildings are all made of stone. They are not simple camps such as camps. In addition, the excavation traces such as wells and drainage channels are also clearly visible. It's not so much a camp, as it is a small town-at least in everyone's eyes, only Sean knows that this place like a small town is the final destination of their trip.

"Portoroa Outpost!" Du Luen looked at the small town in front of him, with a look of astonishment on his face, "It is so complete!"

Shaun curled his mouth in disdain: The body inside was more intact. ;