

Chapter 89 Attacking rogue pack

89

AMALTHEA'S POV

'Craziness. This is pure craziness,' Crystal said, and I chuckled at her words, feeling the evil side of me taking over me.

'You know, you worry me a lot when you act like you are not scared of anything in the world. I have been born into many humans, out of which a lot of them died at an early age while some died in their twenties because they weren't able to handle my strength and aura, but you are the only one who has the capability of scaring me back. I might be the wolf of the world who knows nothing can beat me, but you are the only person I fear. Does that even make sense?' Crystal said, and I scoffed.

'Stop acting like a coward. We have two loaded guns with 12 bullets each and 16 daggers. We can easily take down 40 rogues without touching them if we are flexible in our fighting techniques. And did you forget my power to control their powers?' I said before walking forward, looking around to protect myself from any danger lurking in the woods.

I had already called Harry a few seconds ago, and judging from the severity of the matter, I am sure they must be gathering the Soldiers to send here already. Since they can't send all the chamber guards because the rogues might attack the council, they might be preparing the additional ones, and it will take around 10 minutes before they would send them to come to us.

Seeing a few blood drops beside a tree, I knew I was going in the right direction, and it wasn't long before I noticed a few men hiding behind the trees and in bushes, along with a man who was emanating a powerful aura.

And it didn't take me a second to guess who that man was. Alpha of the black blood pack.

0.0%

12:17

Chapter 89 Attacking rogue pack

 +120 Points at most

"What are you guys doing here?" I asked casually before looking at the alpha of the black blood pack, pretending to know nothing about what was going.

"It's you. What are you doing here?" I said with a glare, and he looked at me with an emotionless face.

"We were going to the council chambers. Unfortunately, the rogue pack attacked us, and two of our cars crashed," He said before looking away, and I nodded.

"Okay. And here I thought you guys were hiding from someone," I said, and he looked at me with an unsure expression before sighing.

"The other three are not in good condition, either. Most of my men got injured in the crash and are healing slowly. The rogues are too many in number. There is no way we would take them down with our injured state, so we are buying time by hiding," He said, and I tilted my head.

"Buying time? Hiding? I never thought I would hear such words from the venomous, I mean, prestigious Black blood pack," I said, and he looked at me frostily.

"Anyway, good luck with hiding," I said as I pretended to walk away, and I heard some shuffling of leaves behind me, making me turn around as I noticed him coming towards me.

"What is it?" I asked.

"I don't think you should roam the woods like this -"

"And do what? Hide with you? I have already called Harry and told him about what happened here. I saw your crashed cars earlier and saved those two men," I said, coming clean this time, and he nodded.

"Thank you for that. I wasn't able to reach them for quite some time," he said, and I was about to add something when I saw something shining at a distance, and before I could react, a dagger was thrown towards our direction, hitting the subordinate whose leg was sticking out from behind the tree.

'Ahhh' The subordinate screamed in pain, and I looked at the rogue who threw the dagger before taking out my gun. Shooting his head with my gun, I tilted my head before looking at Alpha Ace.

"You were saying something?" I asked, and he looked at my gun before looking at me.

"Look, I might've called Harry, but you know we are 20+ kilometers away from there, right? He might be able to come here in half an hour because of the rough path. The army will help you, but are you sure you will hold up till then?" I asked, and he looked at his subordinates, who were bleeding, before sighing.

"It's not like I can fight them, either. They are more than fifty, and no matter how flexibly I fight, there is no way I will be able to save them. I can kill the rogues, but what if they kill my people? There is nothing more important than saving their lives at the moment," Alpha Ace said, and I stepped closer to him before looking straight into his eyes.

"I never knew Alpha Ace, the alpha of the most vicious pack, cares so much about his people," I said.

"I care about my people more than my life. We are called the vicious pack because we hate when people try to double-cross us and kill them without thinking twice," He said, and I hummed.

"We have only one option then," I said, and he raised his eyebrows at me.

"We fight. There is no way they would spare you, and even if you can kill all of them, the chances that your people would get to see tomorrow's sunrise are below ten percent," I said, and he looked at me before nodding.

"Do you have a plan?" He asked me, and I quirked my brows.

"Woah. Why are you asking me that? What makes you think I will help you? Aren't you putting too much trust in me? Why should I help you in the first place?" I asked, and he sighed before looking at his men.

"You will help us because you are Luna Jade. The daughter of Matthew and Thea Jade, who were known for their big hearts. If we only talk about you, then you personally hate rogues who are bullies, even if you are living in the woods among rogues for three months. You will help me because you are righteous and know how to help the one in need," He said, and I looked at him before sighing.

"You got me there," I said before sighing and looking at them.

"You say there are more than fifty, right? Let's take an average of 65. Will you be able to fight fifteen at least? The man in the blue shirt is most probably 80% healed. He could take down 2-3 rogues too, right? The one in the black, blue hat, blonde hair, and the tattoo one, you all will be able to take at least two rogues if not many, right?" I asked, and all of them looked at me before nodding.

"I can take 5 of them if they fight without weapons and in their human forms," The blue shirt one said, and I nodded.

"Don't worry about their wolf forms. Let's see if we can get over them. You, the one over there, take this gun. It will help you. You are the weakest one here. I hope you can shoot the targets correctly, at least," I said before throwing my gun at the one who was shot just now.

"But there are only 11 bullets in this. Are you sure we would be able to make it through with this? Do you have more bullets?" He asked, and I scoffed.

"Don't worry. Just pray you will get the chance to shoot those 11 bullets. Maybe you won't even get to live to shoot the twelfth one. Just consider yourself lucky that I am not leaving you with nothing to protect yourself," I said before looking at Ace, and he looked at me with a glint in his eyes that was too hard to decipher.

"What? Do you think I am being unfair to your subordinate? If yes, then suck up to it. It's not like I was walking through the woods intending to kill a rogue pack in mind," I said before telling them to hide behind the trees and try to get away from each other.

"We had a few guns in our cars, too. Unfortunately, we didn't take them out because the rogues suddenly attacked, and we had to run to save our lives and didn't have enough time to take out the -"

"Stop focusing on what you had, and start thinking about how to tackle the situation with what you have," I said before looking at him, and he nodded.

"I am going first. Let me tackle a few by shooting. They won't be able to smell my blood as I am the only one, who is clean here," I said, and he suddenly held my hand.

"Are you sure about it?" He asked, and I scoffed.

"Do you have a better way? Do you want to go first with your bleeding arm that will let them know about your position beforehand and give them an upper hand?" I asked, and he shook his head, making me smirk.

'Amalthea, you didn't even put your condition before starting the task. Are you sure he will help us later?' Crystal said, and I shook my head.

'It's not about the condition anymore, Crystal. It's about his people's life and my reputation now. I don't want them to die,' I said, and she sighed.

Walking ahead by hiding behind the trees so that they don't get to me and attack me, I stopped when I saw a few rogues hiding behind the trees.

Pulling out my gun, I took a deep breath before putting on the silencer. It will help me keep the sound that might give away my position.

Hitting the rogues one by one, making them shout in pain before they died, I scowled when I missed one hit. Damn, I just lost a chance to kill one more rogue. I thought before stuffing the gun in my hand when the bullets ended.

"Now!" I shouted as the rogues started to run towards the direction where the alpha and his subordinates were.

Standing behind the tree, I started hitting the rogues one by one with my daggers laced with wolfsbane and silver, smiling when it hit them accurately.

Even a slight cut would be lethal for them. Let's see how long they will survive when the wolfsbane is going to take over the blood and run through their veins like a lethal poison. I smirked before taking out all my daggers and throwing them at the rogues, who were running towards Ace and his subordinates.

Once my 16 daggers were also thrown, I finally came forward before running towards Ace.

"It's time to attack them in full swing," I said, and he nodded at me before giving orders to his subordinates to cover different directions.

Picking up the daggers from the dead rogues, I started hitting the rogues who tried to attack us, slicing and cutting without even looking, as I tried to move my limbs as fast as I could.

Wincing in pain as one of them hit me with a log, making me fall to the ground, I kicked the rogue who was about to hit me again before throwing the dagger straight into his chest.

Coughing a bit, I looked at Ace, who was hitting the rogues with a growl and an angry look on his face, like a wolf going crazy. Even the subordinates were fighting to their best while the weakest one was trying his best to aim at the rogue, making me sigh.

Snatching the gun from his hand, I shot the rogue who was about to attach Ace from behind before tossing the gun back to him.

"Use them wisely and help your alpha, okay?" I said, and he nodded.

"Luna Jade!" Ace shouted at me, and before I could turn completely, I felt someone plunging a knife into the side of my hand, making me look at the rogue who attacked me with an evil look.

