

Chapter 90 Thanks to Alpha Ace

90

AMALTHEA'S POV

"That's it? This is all that you could do? I didn't expect so little from the feared rogue pack," I asked, and he looked at me with an unsure expression as he stepped back from me, making me chuckle darkly.

Gripping the hand of the rogue who was about to attack me from the side, I twisted it behind him before kicking below his knees and ripping his hand from his body, making him scream in agony. His scream was so loud that I saw the rogues rushing toward us, pausing in their steps as they looked at me.

"This is what happens when you mess with the wrong person," I announced before holding his hair in my hand while he screamed in agony before kicking his back and twisting his head, making him fall lifeless.

Looking back at the rogue, who had plunged the knife into my hand, I smirked.

"Don't you know I am a rogue, like you guys? You know we don't abide by any rules, right? It's pure killing. Killing by any means," I said, and the rogues stepped back from me, making me sigh.

Taking the dagger from one of the dead rogues, I held the rogue who attacked me by the shoulder, kicking his legs, making him fall before I plunged the dagger into his chest, making his lifeless body fall on my legs.

"This is fun," I said, before wiping the blood from my face with the back of my hand.

"Who's next?" I asked, and the rogues growled at me before charging

Chapter 90 Thanks to Alpha Ace
together, making me chuckle.

 +120 Points at most

Taking the long knife that the rogue head used to hurt me, I clinked it with my daggers before holding them in my hands tightly.

Hitting the remaining rogues wherever I could, I plunged the knife into the rogue before kicking him away and then plunging the knife into another rogue.

Ace and his subordinates took care of some of the rogues, and after plunging my dagger into the last rogue, I threw him on the ground before looking around to see if anyone was left.

"Luna Jade, are you okay?" Ace asked with an unsure expression as he walked towards me hesitantly.

"Of course, I am. Does it look like I am not fine? Ha, it's been so long since I had fun like today," I said, and I was about to go towards my duffle bag to take out my water bottle and wash my wound when I heard the roaring sounds of engines.

Hearing hurried footsteps, I turned to look at Harry, who rushed towards me with a panicked look.

"Thea, are you okay? God, you scared me. What is all this? How did this happen? All you said was a rogue pack attacked you, but you are not the one to make any mistakes while roaming the forests. How did they catch up to you?" He asked me one after the other, and I felt the evil glint in me fading away when he placed his hand on my cheeks.

"Let's talk about this later," I said before sighing and hugging him.

"I was scared. Thanks to Alpha Ace, who saved us with his quick wittiness," I said before placing my head on Harry's chest, looking at Ace, who had a look of disbelief as he raised his brows at me.

"Alpha Ace, we are sorry we couldn't reach you in time. Are you guys okay? Mace? Arrange for all the injured to go to the chambers safely," Harry said.

"Don't worry, Harry. We are fine. We were fighting like an untamed evil bull and didn't see how we were killing like a freaking killing machine before you came. But now that you have come, everything is fine," Ace said as he looked at me with a questioning gaze, and I hummed before rubbing my face on Harry's shirt, making him pat my back as he sighed before hugging me tightly.

"Don't worry. It's over now. I am here," Harry said, and I hummed before jumping on his back, letting him give me a piggyback ride.

"Can you make sure you get all 16 daggers and that knife? These are quite dear to me," I said, and Harry nodded at his men, who started taking out the daggers.

"Oh, and be careful not to hurt yourself. Those are silver made and laced with wolfsbane. Let's not get hurt," I mumbled, and Ace coughed before looking away, making Harry sigh.

After thirty minutes of the ride, we reached the council chambers, and Ace and everyone got down from the car along with me.

"Let's go," Harry said, and I nodded at him before walking inside the council chambers, rolling my eyes when everyone in the hall bowed down 90 degrees.

"Amalthea, my favorite girl in the world," Uncle Chris said as he looked at everyone who bowed even more.

I didn't miss, how seeing everyone bowing to me, Ace raised his brows at me for a few seconds before standing beside me.

"Stand straight. You guys can continue with your work. Uncle Chris, I am going to my room to freshen up a bit. Harry, ask the chef to prepare something for me. We will meet in the meeting hall after forty minutes. You can call whoever you think we need to attend the meeting regarding these rogue pack attacks. This is a serious matter. If Alpha Ace wouldn't have been there, his subordinates and I would have lost our lives," I said with an expressionless face, and Uncle Chris sighed before looking at everyone.

"You heard her. Call the committee and tell them we have met in an hour," Uncle Chris said, and I nodded at him before walking toward the stairs to go to my room.

Once inside the room, I gritted my teeth before taking off my jacket. Damn it. It hurts like hell. Looking at the deep, ugly wound on my hand caused by that rogue, I winced a bit before sitting on the bed.

"Amalthea, I heard you got hurt -" Harry barged into my room before pausing when he saw me sitting in nothing but a sports bra and pants.

"I am sorry, I shouldn't have just barged in," He said.

"It's okay. It's not like I am wearing nothing. Besides, I didn't close the door," I said and was about to ask him to close it when Alpha Ace entered the room, raising his brows as he looked at me.

"It's quite deep," He said, his eyes focussed on my right hand, and I sighed before nodding.

"Yeah. Harry, can you please ask the doctor to come here once he is done with those heavily wounded ones?" I asked, and he rolled his eyes before clapping.

The council doctor, Sam, entered the room before rolling his eyes as he looked at my wound before shaking his head.

"What were you doing when he was attacking with a knife?" He asked, and I rolled my eyes at him.

"I was waiting for him to attack me. I looked at everyone fighting, and I was like, wow, such a beautiful scene. Let me f*cking enjoy it," I said, and he scoffed before sitting on the bed beside me.

"I am sure you are capable of ending a fight without getting hurt. There is no way you weren't distracted," He said, and I sighed.

"I was busy looking at Alpha Ace. You know, he was looking so sexy and appealing when he was fighting like that. You know I have a thing for a mature and powerful man, don't you?" I said, and he applied antiseptic on my wound, making me wince.

"Ouch! Can you be at least a little gentle? I am your patient and not your friend right now. You are deliberately pressing it more to hurt me," I said, and he nodded.

"Well, you are a bad woman with no filter on her mouth. You deserve this much," He said, and I looked at Harry, who shrugged his shoulders.

"So I look sexy and appealing, huh?" Ace asked me, and I tilted my head.

"Are we forgetting about our feud now? We are still on bad terms, remember?" I said, and he scoffed.

"Well, I guess -" Ace started, but paused when Harry's phone suddenly rang.

"Hey, Joseph. What's up, man? Are you coming to the ceremony? Of course, I am thrilled. And now when - . Sam, can you be a little gentle with her? It's a deep wound. Amalthea might look tough, but she is still a girl," Harry said to Sam, making me flare my tongue at him.

"You heard him? Be gentle," I said to Sam, and he rolled his eyes at me.

"I will take this call and come back, okay? Don't be naughty," Harry said before ruffling my hair and kissing my temple, making me nod like an obedient girl.

Turning my head, I looked at Ace, who was rolling his eyes at me, making me scoff at him.

