

Chapter 105 In Trouble

The colleagues, who witnessed this scene, hurried to help Kiley up and asked with concern, "Kiley, are you okay?"

Whimpering, Kiley stood up unsteadily. Due to the broken glass on the ground piercing her skin, there were the cuts on her thighs and knees, and they were all bleeding.

Kiley's face was crumpled and she hissed in pain.

Whispering, some onlookers discussed among each other rather loudly.

"Oh my God! Kiley is badly hurt. Her injuries look serious."

"Celia is in trouble. I think the human resources department is going to call her for a serious talk."

Hearing the discussions circling around her, Celia didn't panic. Instead, she remained calm as she defended herself. "Everyone should have seen it clearly just now. It was Kiley who came to grab my phone and fell to the ground by herself. I didn't do anything to her."

Several female colleagues, who had a good relationship with Kiley, wanted to speak up for her, but Derek spoke first.

"Well, I've witnessed the whole incident myself, and the surveillance video has also recorded everything. If the company wants to investigate this matter, I will testify and tell them everything I saw."

Kiley was so angry that she didn't care about what Derek said at all. She just pointed at Celia and shouted, "You dare to make false countercharges when I have been so seriously injured? You are too vicious! I tell you, I won't let this slide easily!"

At this time, a kind-hearted colleague called an ambulance, and someone handed a tissue to Kiley to wipe the blood while comforting her, "Kiley, calm down."

This sympathizing act encouraged Kiley to act even more rueful as she held the tissue in her hand and bawled, tears and snot running down her face.

"Calm down? How can I calm down when I am treated like this? It is all Celia's fault! My kindness has been regarded as malice, and she tried to taint my reputation, not to mention that she also hurt me. She must compensate for my injuries!"

Celia was so pissed off that a sneer appeared on her face. "You got what you deserve. It has nothing to do with me!"

Kiley gnashed her teeth in anger. She roared, "Don't think you can do anything at will, relying on the support of Brea. Let me tell you, this matter is not over!"

Her voice was getting louder and louder, which attracted more and more colleagues to gather at the scene and discuss this matter in low voices.

"Kiley is making trouble out of nothing. We all knew how she's like. She really deserves that!"

"But this time, she just kindly made some suggestions to her colleague! It is Celia who is so arrogant. She is just a trouble maker and such a jinx!"

Derek couldn't let them continue making a scene, so he had to act like a manager and said in an authoritative tone, "Shut up, everyone! Go back to your own seats!"

After all, his status was higher than that of them. So, seeing that he was angry, everyone gradually became silent.

Soon, the ambulance arrived and several female colleagues helped Kiley get into the vehicle to head to the hospital.

Derek asked the cleaning lady to clean the glass and blood on the ground. Now that the drama was over, everyone left soon and went back to work.

Celia rubbed her forehead irritably, feeling what happened just now was really annoying.

Sensing her downcast mood, Derek walked through the crowd and comforted her, "Cece, people can tell right and wrong. Everyone knows who is right and who is wrong about this matter today. If no one believes you, the surveillance camera and I can prove your innocence. Don't worry."

Celia forced a smile and said helplessly, "Although I am clear about my conscience, I am afraid many colleagues would still misunderstand me. Although I don't want to care about what others think of me, I can't help but be bothered. Besides, this is my workplace and I will become the subject judged by the public if the misunderstanding remains unsolved."

She sighed and continued, "Things seem to develop into a big deal out of nothing every time I am involved. It's only been a short time since I got here. What will the company think of me?"

Derek patted her on the shoulder and said straightforwardly, "Don't be too harsh on yourself. It's because you are so outstanding and dazzling that some people are jealous of you, so they deliberately add insult to the injury. But that doesn't mean you are wrong."

His eyes were very gentle as he smiled at her and said, "You just need to be yourself. I don't want you to compromise for anyone or anything."

Celia fell into daze for a while as his words reminded her of Tyson.

She remembered that Tyson once said something similar to her. He said that she should always believe in herself and could always do what she liked since that was who she was.

At the thought of Tyson, Celia's mood brightened and she couldn't help smiling.

"Thank you for saying that."

Derek was stunned at the sight of her beautiful smile. He felt touched and his heart began beating fast. The only thing he could think about right now was how much he wanted to hold her in his arms, and directly express his feelings to her.

However, he didn't dare to rush things. At least, not at this moment when he still didn't know how Celia felt about him.
