

Chapter 524 Keira Had To Give In

Celia walked up to Keira and faked a smile. "Miss Guerrero, how about I be the judge of who is right or wrong?"

Keira stopped sobbing and looked up at Celia.

"You..."

Keira felt that Celia looked vaguely familiar and tried to remember where she had seen her before. Soon, she recalled that Celia was the designer whom she met on her previous trip to the Semshy Group.

At that time, she wanted to collaborate on a design with Celia, but was refused.

Keira was confused by Celia's question, so she asked, "You are the designer at the Semshy Group, right?"

Celia nodded and praised, "Yes, you have a good memory."

Keira thought that Brea was afraid to confront her now, so she raised her chin and sneered, "Aren't you a little bold for a designer?"

Keira motioned for Kelley to show the press releases to Celia.

"Look at these. My reputation has greatly suffered because of these press releases. Now, I'm considering suing Brea. If she doesn't want to be sued, she has to give me something in exchange."

Celia understood what she meant.

But she remained silent. She kept her composure and read the press releases carefully.

She soon found a loophole and started interrogating Keira, "Miss Guerrero, you said that Brea stole a role that originally belonged to you. Can you tell me which TV show was it in? I flipped through many pages but I couldn't find any mention of it."

The smile on Keira's face froze when she heard what Celia said. She had trouble finding words to retort.

Seeing her troubled expression, Celia knew she was guilty. She took advantage of the situation and continued her interrogation. "As far as I know, Brea has just secured a role in a show. Were you originally given the part of the heroine in that show?"

"I..."

Before Keira could explain, Celia interrupted her, "This show requires potential actors to go through a formal audition and the list of actors is in the producer's hands. If you insist that Brea had stolen your role in the show, then why don't we go through the list and see if your name is on it? Even if your name is on it, it doesn't necessarily mean that Brea took the role from you. Perhaps you failed the audition as the director thought that you were an unsuitable fit for the character. That would have nothing to do with Brea, right? "

Guilt was written all over Keira's face. "Maybe it was not a role that she took from me..." mumbled Keira.

"No? Then it must be about a brand endorsement? But Brea never had to audition for any brand that she represents currently. All the brand owners came to her voluntarily and hoped that she could be their ambassadress. So it's also impossible that she took an endorsement from you. Miss Guerrero, I am trying to seek justice for you. But you're making it hard for me by not telling the truth."

Keira was speechless. She looked desperately at her assistants for help to rebut Celia.

The assistants looked at each other but none of them dared to speak up. Finally, one petite girl plucked up her courage and argued, "What you said isn't important. Maybe we made a mistake. But there is another problem in the press releases. It was reported that Keira deliberately provoked Brea and Wayne but she didn't. How do you explain it?"

Celia flipped through the press releases again and smiled, "It is as you said. Miss Guerrero didn't deliberately provoke them."

Keira felt hopeful again. She turned to Brea with tears welling up in her eyes. "Did you hear that? Even your own designer said that I didn't deliberately provoke you. How dare you post such a statement to slander me?"

Brea was furious.

She rolled up her sleeves and was about to step forward when Celia stopped her. Celia stood in front of her and smiled at Keira. "I am not finished yet. Don't be so anxious to prove your innocence. What I meant was, you were not deliberately provoking her. You were framing her!"

"Nonsense!"

Keira felt cornered and her mind went blank. Disregarding her public image, she screamed hysterically, "You are slandering me. I will sue you!"

"By all means, sue us. Don't just say it and not take action." Celia took out a flash drive from her pocket and waved it in front of Keira. "I've got all the evidence in this flash drive. I spent a lot of money buying it, you know. It proves you attempted to pour gasoline on her, and smear Brea's reputation by asking some people to report that she was the other woman. I think that this flash drive is money well spent. Every piece of evidence in it can make sure that you never set foot in the entertainment industry again."
