

Chapter 10 Well-behaved Mrs. Yates

The stamp landed on the paper with a thud.

By the time Sandra got in the car again, she had become a married woman.

“Mr. Yates, I have a request to make.”

“Go ahead.” Christopher crossed his long legs and gazed at her with a trace of indolence.

“I hope we won’t make our relationship public for the time being.”

“Why?”

“I’m going to take back what belongs to me from Brian, so I can’t risk arousing his suspicions for now. But don’t worry. I’m your wife now. I’ll behave myself and maintain my chastity and reputation. I’m gonna leave Brian’s house and move back to my own home.”

Christopher, of course, believed every word she said when he saw the earnest look on her face.

She had kept her virginity for such a long time even after becoming Brian’s ancée. If that could not prove her integrity, what could?

“Okay!”

Christopher’s narrow eyes ashed. When he looked at Sandra again, there was suddenly a sharp light in his eyes. “But you gotta get it done faster. I don’t have much patience.”

Sandra agreed, then added, “Thank you for what you did for me today.”

“It was nothing.”

“But in the future, I want to rely on myself.”

Sandra opened the door and got out of the car. Then, Chet Zaine, the special assistant, turned his head to the back seat and asked Christopher for instructions. “President, are you really letting Madam go like this? Mr. Quentin and his son are both suspicious and vicious. They’re not easy to deal with...”

Christopher did not say a word.

He knew that the woman was no longer the little girl she had once been. Now, he wanted to see how smart she really was.

Brian got off work and went home only to nd that Sandra was not there. He was a little surprised.

Usually, when she did not have to work, she would wait for him at home like a good wife. He immediately called her. He was kind of scared out of his wits when he learned that she had moved back to the Simons’. He quickly started the car and raced over to her place in less than an hour.

“Sandra, what’s with you? Did I do something to upset you?” Brian hurriedly studied her expression the moment they met.

With a perfectly normal expression on her face, Sandra said, “Nothing. I’m just a little homesick, so I came back to live here for a couple of days.”

“Really?”

The board meeting would be held tomorrow. If he lost Sandra’s support now, Samuel would denitely break his legs.

Sandra nodded, not denying it.

Brian could not tell that there was anything wrong. He gradually relaxed and said, “Sandra, I heard that you went to the advocate interview today... and made it to the next round, didn’t you?”

The news traveled so fast!

Sandra guessed that Samuel, Queenie, and Kim were very unhappy today. They had probably complained to Brian, so he was there to probe.

Of course, Sandra would not give herself away. She said with a charming smile, “Yes, are you happy for me?”

Brian gave a sort of wry smile and said, “Of course, how could they not have chosen you since you are so pretty... But... didn’t you say that you would stay at home and be a full-time wife and wouldn’t step into that circle again?”

Sandra presented her cut-and-dried excuse. “I thought so at rst. But that day, I realized Kim was right. She said that I was like a parasite. Thus, I think I’d better go out and nd a job. That’s the kind of woman you deserve.”