

Chapter 14 Is She the Sandra I know?

“Okay!” Mrs. Simons smiled with gratification.

The next day, Sandra went to visit Maggie.

“Maggie, will you work with me on this?”

Maggie was very excited about it. She answered without any hesitation, “I’ve been looking forward to this day for so long. Sandra, it’s just like old times!”

She and Maggie worked for a whole day preparing content for the exclusive interview with Mask. They did their best to make it perfect. Sandra would go to the station and have a meeting with Mask’s team to discuss the contents the next day.

Sandra deliberately asked about the program on the outstanding young men’s speeches. With a slightly surprised tone, Maggie said that the station had eventually let her take charge of the show.

Maggie asked tentatively, “Sandra, is it you who got me this opportunity?”

Sandra just congratulated her with a smile, not willing to explain.

She had been feeling guilty toward Maggie for being so hell-bent on resigning two years ago. Now, this was her way to compensate Maggie.

“It must have been you.”

The corners of Maggie’s eyes were lifted by a smile, as so were her eyebrows. “Thank you, Sandra. If there’s anything I can help you with, just ask.”

Sandra had easily gotten her job back at the TV station, and all her privileges were still the same. Head Haile personally stamped his name on her employment contract to welcome her back. It could be imagined just how powerful the force behind Sandra was. It was no surprise that she had also managed to get Maggie a show. After all, she had often done this kind of righteous deed in the past.

“I do have something I wish you could help me with,” Sandra said straightforwardly.

Maggie said without hesitation, “Just tell me what it is!”

“Aren’t you going to Germany for an interview in two days? I want you to tweak your schedule and take Brian’s plane to and from Germany. I need to know what he and Kim are doing.”

It was not until then that Sandra told Maggie that Brian was cheating on her with Kim. After hearing this, Maggie was so mad that her fake eyelashes nearly fell off.

No wonder Sandra can now see Brian’s true colors. It turns out that that love rat has brought it on himself!

Hearing Maggie curse Brian, Sandra found that she was no longer as angry and devastated as she had felt when she rst found out about them. Now, she just wanted to make them pay the price.

Recently, Brian and Kim seemed to have been cold-shouldering each other, but judging by Kim’s character, she would not let go of Brian, her sugar daddy, without a ght. Thus, Sandra reckoned that she needed to know her enemy as well as herself to win this game.

Mask did not come to the TV station until it was almost the afternoon. But as soon as he heard that they were going to do an exclusive interview with him, he lost his temper on the spot.

He was a genius at electronic sports. His team intended to get him more famous while his winning the contest was still a trending topic so that they could develop all the peripheral businesses. However, he did not approve of this kind of marketing method.

“To hell with the exclusive interview! I won’t do it!”

Mask was notorious for his bad temper in and beyond his circle. Few stations had managed to get a chance to interview him. Countless times, Mask had strongly bashed others and stormed out halfway through his interview.

To his surprise, this time, his team had gotten him another interview behind his back. It was no wonder that he was angry.

Kim began to feel glad that she had not been picked to do it.

The station soon fell into chaos because of this. Deputy Head Lew personally rushed to the scene. Mask’s team leader had failed to get Mask to come around in the reception room, so she came out to vent her anger on Deputy Head Lew.

“Mr. Lew, I gave you the exclusive interview because I saw that you sincerely wanted the chance. But where is your sincerity now? Huh?

“All I saw was you not taking Mask seriously. How could you pick a rookie to do the interview? If it’s going to be like this, there is no need for us to continue our cooperation!”

Hearing this dressing-down, Deputy Head Lew ushered with shame. Nevertheless, he forced an apologetic smile and explained, “The host was picked by Mr. Yates in person. We couldn’t do anything...”

The leader interrupted him. “Are you threatening us with Mr. Yates? I’m telling you, Mr. Yates has always thought highly of Mask. He has never forced him to do anything he doesn’t want to do. Even if you take this matter to Mr. Yates, you’ll be the one to suffer!”

Deputy Head Lew also needed someone to take his anger out on. He turned around, pointed a nger at Maggie’s nose, and snarled, “It’s all because of you! You ruined the interview before it even began! What did I say before? That you’d blow whatever program I gave you!”

“One unsuccessful writer and director plus one has-been host. Well, how could this program turn out ne?” Someone in the crowd around them had long been beside herself with jealousy and so she started making comments.

Sandra was in the eye of the storm. Trying to hide the glee in her eyes, Kim said, “Sandra, this exclusive interview is yours. Now that it has turned out like this, how do you think we should deal with it?”

Deputy Head Lew turned around, racking his brains for a way to appease the fury of Mask’s leader. “As a matter of fact, Sandra is not really a rookie. She had also made some achievements in the past...”

“Who?”

Mask’s leader was surprised. “Hold on, is the Sandra you’re talking about... the Sandra I know?”