

Master Odell 1701

Chapter 1701

As soon as the words subsided, consecutive gasps could be heard across the hall.

“No way. Ms. Fowler has a child?”

“Was she married?”

“Who knows. Why would Young Master Carl marry her? Has she been lying to him?”

All the guests looked at Sherry disdainfully.

Sherry’s face turned pale. She did not expect someone to follow her and take pictures of her together with John and Caprice in the past few days

No wonder Ron was happy seeing them getting engaged, and no wonder they even invited Madam Sager to the engagement party.

It was all because they had planned this from the start.

Sherry stared at Aiden coldly. "Aiden, there are a lot of things that you don't know about me. Do I need to tell you everything about my life in detail?"

Aiden remained smiling wickedly. "If that man is your brother and he's here in Coastrock with niece, why didn't you invite him to your engagement party with Carl?"

Sherry frowned.

Discussion could be heard from the crowd once more.

"Yeah. If her brother is in Coastrock, why didn't she invite him to the engagement party?"

"Something smells fishy."

Ada then said, "What's wrong, Sherry? No more excuses?"

Aiden then turned to the entrance, which led the others in the same direction as well.

However, the breeze from the woods brought no one to the entrance except for silence and refreshment.

Ron and Caden looked at Aiden.

Aiden frowned. He spoke into the phone, which was still connected, "Where are you? Why aren't you coming out?"

Then, a series of footsteps approached.

Aiden looked at the entrance. The one who came in was the person in charge of the engagement ceremony that doubled as Lisa's assistant.

The assistant ran to Lisa, panting, and said, "Lisa, M-Master Stockton is here. He said he's here to congratulate Young Master Carl and Ms. Fowler

Lisa was shocked. "Master Stockton? Which Master Stockton?"

Lisa was stunned and was left speechless for a while.

Ron, Aiden and Caden were shocked too. They knew the man before them as Sherry's ex-husband, but they did not expect him to be such a high-profile person!

John Stockton, the richest man in Glenchester!

Sherry's ex-husband was the richest man in Glenchester?!

The three of them did not know what to feel. Should they be happy because they had exposed. Sherry and her ex-husband, or should they be worried because they had exposed Sherry's ex-husband as the richest man in Glenchester?

After all, be it his background, his looks, or his capabilities, John was a lot better than Carl.

Ron, Aiden, and Caden could not believe their eyes. The disbelief put a complicated reaction on their faces, so complicated that they looked nothing like their calm selves.

The other guests felt more or less the same way when they recognized John and Caprice as the man and girl on the big screen earlier.

John simply smiled at them.

Not only was he not mad, but he even pushed the box closer to Sherry with the most elegant smile. He then opened the box.

Almost instinctively, Sherry took a step backward with Caprice. Then, she saw a piece of paper in the box.

It was folded multiple times and stuffed into the ring slot.

Sherry spotted the words on the edge: marriage certificate. Her expression changed, and she immediately snatched the box away.

John said, "That's a copy."

In other words, he had withheld the original copy and could give her as many copies as she could snatch or throw away

Ada could no longer stay quiet. She said, "Carl, even if her ex-husband is Master Stockton, she used to be married! She's out of your league!"

Carl's gaze turned cold.

John turned to Ada with a vicious grin. "Who might this be?"

Maybe Carl's frosty gaze scared her, or maybe because she was afraid of John's vicious smile, Ada immediately averted their gazes.

Anne threw a warning glare at her before she said to John, "Master Stockon, she's my brother's daughter. My brother and his wife rarely have the time to educate her. Please forgive her impoliteness."

John smiled. "Mr. Wright, your niece really needs someone to teach her where her place is. Please educate her properly."

Any one of the Sagers could call out Sherry's past marriage, but not Ada.

Why would an outsider have the right to lecture Sherry?

Ron responded nervously, "Yes, I will. Thank you for the advice. I will educate her about manners properly when we get home."

Carl glared at John. "Let her go!"

John curled his lips. "Young Master Carl, if you have the capabilities to shut your family up, it wouldn't have ended like this."

Carl flushed with gritted teeth.

The others were silenced as well.

Only Ron and Anne showed a hint of mockery and disdain in their expressions.

John was practically calling Carl useless for not being capable enough to convince Madam Sager and the others.

Lisa sighed.

The entire hall plunged into silence. No one dared to speak another word.

Caprice’s eyes flickered. “Did Daddy bully you again?”
Sherry did not want her relationship with John affecting the girl, so she said, “No. I just don’t like him.”

She was probably mad at him for ruining her engagement with Carl.

John's eyes looked disheartened but only for a moment. He curled his lips, and even his golden- framed glasses could not hide the delight in his eyes.

Sherry might be mad at him, but she could no longer be with Carl.

He headed to the door, leaned against the wall, and waited silently.

Inside the house, after Sherry shut the door, Caprice pouted. "Mommy, Daddy hasn't come in."

Sherry said, "He doesn't want to come in."

Caprice was small, but she was not an idiot. She protruded her lips and said, "You didn't let him in."

Sherry pursed her lips, trying to come up with an excuse to fool the little girl.
