Chapter 2141

The security guards almost caught up to her.

Isabel did not have the time to turn around. She climbed up the stairs and went straight up to the third floor, which was empty.

The third floor was for meetings and all the doors were closed at the moment.

Isabel panted heavily as she continued running forward. She was trying the doors and wanted to hide inside one of the meeting rooms.

Unfortunately, all the doors were locked.

The footsteps of the security guards came closer.

Would this be the end for her?

Exhausted, Isabel took a few steps forward to reach the next door.

She did not hold any hope left but she tried to reach for the doorknob nevertheless.

However, before she could reach it, the door opened.

Isabel was shocked.

Why?

They had broken up!

Her eyes fluttered. She smiled and answered, "Yeah, I'm trying to get myself killed, but it has nothing to do with you. Why are you so riled up?"

Roland pursed his lips. His expression turned bitter.

If Isabel was not familiar with his temper, she would be terrified by his expression.

She gritted her teeth and said, "Roland, we've broken up a long time ago."

Roland pursed his lips tighter. If Isabel was correct, the man was biting his lip.

Isabel scoffed. "If we're no one to each other, please let me go. My life and death have nothing to do with you."

Isabel asked, "What is that you want to do in Southboro? Why must you finish whatever you want to do, only then you can be with me openly?"

A quick thought later, Isabel frowned and added, "Were we not together openly before?"

As far as she knew, they were quite open with their relationship.

"It's a long story. Let's get you out first," Roland said. He held her hand and wanted to leave.

Isabel did not move. She said coldly, "If you don't make things clear now, I won't leave with you."

She refused to follow him. If she followed him out and he brushed her off with some excuse again, she would not be able to do anything against him.

Roland sighed helplessly. "Isabel, only with your family's approval can we be together openly."

Isabel thought of when Flint called her mentioning Roland's departure from the company. Flint told her that her father disagreed with them being together, so Roland left the company.

However, it was not a big deal to her.

Isabel said, "I can handle my dad. My mom, my brother, and Flint, they all respected my decision. If I want to be with you, they won't stop me."

Isabel's heart clutched but she remained irritated.

She grunted and said, "What are you afraid of? If you're really afraid, why did you pretend that you didn't see me? Why did you run away?"

Roland frowned. "Isabel, I..."

"What you? If you don't explain yourself, let me go."

Roland hugged her tightly. "Isabel, I miss you. If I don't pretend that I didn't see you, I would..."

Isabel's eyes fluttered. She asked with a raised brow, "You would what?"

Roland moved closer to her and looked at her with bloodshot eyes. "I would hug you and kiss you."

Isabel's heart pounded, and her face blushed. The irritation and annoyance in her heart were gone.

She averted his gaze and said timidly, "I'm not that stupid. Don't expect me to forgive you after telling me all this."

Roland pursed his lips. "Isabel, you come to the Rockwells' company on purpose right?"

Isabel's eyes fluttered. She said, "Of course it's on purpose, I came here to see Decker."

"You come to see him because you want to make me jealous, am I right?"

When Roland entered the office, Secretary Yamen and the security guard were shocked.
Even Decker was surprised by Roland's arrival, but he was able to squeeze a smile on his face. He asked,
"Roland, at least knock before you come in."
Roland ignored him and turned his attention to Carla. He said, "Let her go."
He sounded cold and succinct. His deep voice naturally sounded dignified.
Decker squinted. He scoffed and said, "Roland, are you ordering me?"
Roland looked at him with the same expression. "You can choose to ignore me but Ms. Houston will be here in five minutes."
Decker looked disheartened. His gaze became gloomy. "Roland, you think that I don't dare to touch you?"
Roland ignored him and stared at him with his calm and clear eyes.
Even though Decker's gloomy gaze was terrifying and if his gaze could kill, he would always be dead. He was unfazed.
The room went silent for a moment.
Decker then said, "Release her."

The security guard released Carla.

Judging from the tone, Isabel knew it was Roland.

The displeasure on her face faded. She quickly tapped on the screen of the phone and replied, "Who are you?"

"Roland."

Isabel curled her lips before she put her phone away.

...

At the same time, a white car drove into the parking lot of the Rockwells' building.

Clarice came down from the car, her heels clacked as she elegantly entered the building.

When the security guards and receptionists saw her, they greeted her respectfully, "Ms. Houston."

Clarice walked past them, headed to the elevator, and went up to Decker's office.

She went inside without even knocking.

Inside the spacious office, Decker was alone at his desk, reading through documents.

Being the eldest daughter of the Houstons, if Clarice left, Decker would lose the support and resources from the Houstons.

With that, Clarice said coldly, "Roland is a wicked man."

Decker said softly, "It's okay. Just treat it as spam, forget about it. Go home and have a good rest. I'll never let Roland get his way."

Clarice hummed a reply. She looked at him strongly and said, "Decker, I'll always be by your side. If you run into any problems, just go to my father."

Decker smiled. "I know. Go back and rest, don't worry about me."

Clarice hugged him again before she left.

After she left the office, Decker's expression turned cold.

He returned to his desk and called the person that he arranged to watch Roland.

As soon as the call got through, he asked coldly, "Had Roland done anything in the past two days?"

He did not want to expose her but he could not hold back his laughter either.

Isabel was speechless. She was so embarrassed that she could not say a word.

Then, she tossed her phone to the side, her hands akimbo. She grumbled, "Yeah! I was waiting for you! Happy now?"

She looked as red as a tomato, her eyes alluring. Although grumpy, she looked lively and adorable.

Roland's eyes fluttered. He hugged her into his arms and kissed her lips.

The lips locked and entangled for quite a while.

Isabel wanted to push him away at first but she was not strong enough. Not only was he dominating, but he was also gentle with his movements.

He robbed her of her strength and stamina to fight him.

As her body grew weak and her consciousness started to fade, he released her lips.

Isabel's cheeks blushed. Her eyes were covered with a layer of tears.

She felt lost. Then, she looked at her surroundings and realized she was already in the room.

Isabel was curious about how he was doing in the company.

She asked, "Roland, can you tell me what happened after you came back here?"

Roland hugged her into his arms and said, "Two months ago, when I first came back..."

He told Isabel a few things that happened.

When he first came back, Decker told him to leave, but he stayed.

He worked hard and secured a big deal that Decker had been working on for years and it made the shareholders look at him differently. The shareholders were once friends with his late grandmother and father, so based on his recently outstanding performance, they took his side.

Then, his grandfather got to him and made him go back to Rockwells' old mansion. His grandfather tried to persuade him to leave the company but he refused.

He continued working hard and secured a few more deals, which strengthened his position in the company.

He made it sound easy but only he knew how difficult it had been.

Besides, Decker never stopped targeting him from the dark. Even his grandfather was trying to pull him down secretly.

Isabel's chest clenched knowing that he had been fighting alone.

However, it was his fault for leaving her without saying a word and making her think that he wanted to break up. He deserved it.

When the men approached, Roland bolted up.
His towering figure coupled with his frosty look made him look intimidating.
It felt like one more step closer and he could physically hurt them.
The men saw the look on his face and were deterred.
They were all executives of the company, which made them Decker’s subordinates. Although they did not respect Roland, who was not favored by Young Master Rockwell, they witnessed how ruthless he was in the past two months.
It would be a bad idea to try to provoke Roland.
However, simply leaving would make them look like cowards.
They exchanged a quick look and the leading man, a man with a bloated stomach, said with a smile,
“Master Rockwell, what are you doing? We’re just curious what your girlfriend looks like, that’s it.”
“Yeah. We won’t do anything to your girlfriend.”

Roland glared at all of them.

They instinctively avoided his gaze.
