

Chapter 257

When she turned around, she noticed him looking at her with a puzzled expression.

"What's the big rush? You haven't looked at the beauty upstairs. Let's go there."

Saying that, he made his way to the wooden staircase.

"I don't need to. I'm not here on vacation."

"Remember that your one day is not over."

She stomped her leg on the wooden floor and strolled behind him.

When she entered the large bedroom, she noticed a beautiful balcony attached to it. She did not notice that when she saw the house from the outside. She pondered whether it was visible from the house's back.

She was surprised by the seating arrangements there.

Bryan opened the glass door of the balcony, and she stepped onto the balcony.

When he was about to enter, she turned to the door and locked it from outside. When she saw him look dumbfounded, she burst out laughing.

"You are not coming outside. Let me enjoy my time alone."

He knocked on the door, saying,

"This is not fair. Open the door."

She sneered at him. "I would rather stay here alone than spend time with you. My fiancé told me to keep my distance from you. I am just listening to him. Sorry, Alpha."

After that, she went to sit in the hanging swing chair. She stared at the forest view.

Though she looked bold from outside, she was broke from inside. She was clueless as to why she was experiencing all of this.

She hated the man who was looking at her from inside the room. She used to love him deeply, but he rejected her heart, even though she was his mate. Now, when she was trying to move on with someone else, he was trying to stop her from every side.

She laughed at the thought that he was doing all this not to win her heart but to get her to cancel the wedding.

"I will never cancel the wedding," she muttered to herself as she looked at the dark green trees.

She was unaware of how quickly time had gone by. When she took a quick look at her phone, she saw that she had been there for hours.

She turned around and peered into the room. She did not look at the room carefully before coming to the balcony. It was an absolutely stunning bedroom. It was best to live here. But it was far from the town so it was not possible to live here in loneliness.

When her gaze shifted to the other side of the room, she gasped.

On the couch, Bryan was smoking while staring at her. She looked away from him immediately.

She considered spending a long time on the balcony.

'He said one day. How could I give him one day? Did he plan something?' she thought as her eyes widened.

She did not want to sleep with him. She believed he planned to do that. Otherwise, why did he bring her to a place where they were alone?

She felt disgusted by his cheap mentality. Did he think that having sex would make her cancel the wedding?

As time passed, the sky slowly became darker. She was feeling bored. How long would she have to stay there?

She walked to the railing and gazed up at the beautiful moon in the sky.

She was captivated by the moon's beauty. She did not know how she would pass her days in the future. Everything was tearing her apart inside.

All of a sudden, she felt a pair of arms wrap around her waist.

She gasped when Bryan rested his head on her neck.

"H-How did you come? I made sure the door was locked."

He chuckled at her surprised expression and muttered in her ear,

"This is my house, baby girl. I have the keys to every lock."

She was taken aback. If he had the key, why did he not come at that time?

She tried to break free and asked, "So you pretended you could not get inside?"

He responded by nuzzling his nose against her neck. It made her tighten her grip on the railing.

"I don't want to disturb your alone time when you asked me for it. Watching you from afar is my favorite thing to do, by the way."

She bit her bottom lip as he tried to seduce her with his actions. She turned around and tried to push him. But he did not move a little bit.

He stared at her with a calm look.

"Please, Sophia. Don't marry him."

She could not help but laugh. "I knew it. You brought me here to make me a fool again. I am not surprised at all."

He shook his head, slowly moving his hand to cup her cheeks.

"I brought you here because I could not think of what to do. I wanted to spend some time with you to ease my mind."

She locked her gaze on him. Her eyes grew colder with each of his words.

"I can't cancel my wedding with Mila. It's impossible for me. It's not only about me but also about my pack. I wish I could explain it to you. But I still want to be with you. Tell me what is right to do."

Sophia did not move her eyes from him. She grabbed his hands and pushed them away.

"Then be loyal to the woman you are marrying. Stop pestering another woman."

Her cold tone and deep words altered his expression. He shook his head and mumbled,

"I can't. You are my mate. Why are you blind to the fact that Victor wants you only because you are my mate?"

He left her speechless. Did he think no man could like her?

She glared at him and said sarcastically,

"So you know he is aware of it? Is that why you came after me? Then do one thing that will solve all your problems. Reject me as your mate, Alpha Bryan."

Her words seemed to freeze him, leaving him looking stunned. But then he shook her head in response.

Sophia felt there was no point in speaking with this man. "You know what? You don't have to give me any transfer certificates. I will talk to Victor about it. He will use his power to make the dean give it to me, just as you forced him not to. And you still have time to reject me if you don't want me to marry Victor. Even if I die, it has nothing to do with you."

She pushed his chest to move him away and walked to the glass door to leave the balcony.

However, her steps came to a halt when he spoke up from behind.

"I can't reject you as my mate because my heart will never accept it."
