

Chapter 358

Allison opened her eyes. She yawned and sat up in the bed.

As she took a look around, she realized that she was in her bedroom.

She glanced at the window. The window in her room was open, and she could see the bright sunlight streaming in.

"When did I come to my room? I was in the car and..." She paused and looked down at her.

Ryan's black jacket was still on her body. She could still recall the way he had wrapped it around her. She was with him last night until she fell asleep in his car.

"Did he take me to my room?"

She unknowingly pulled the leather jacket close to her nose. She sniffed it, and she was stunned.

It smelled different but pleasant, and it was mixed with his cologne.

Unexpectedly, she blushed and put the jacket beside her on the bed.

She got out of bed and went to the bathroom to take a shower.

Since it was a Sunday, she did not have anything to worry about in terms of her studies. She made her way downstairs in a relaxed manner.

Her mother was sitting on the couch. Surprisingly, her father was also sitting there. They were laughing at each other.

Allison came to a stop in the corner and smiled at her parents while she looked at them. They seemed to enjoy being together.

She was convinced that they were the happiest couple in the world. They both loved and cared for each other.

'Such a happy couple!' She was thinking and feeling sensitive emotions.

When her mother noticed her, she immediately called for her daughter, "Allison, come here."

"Good morning, Mom and Dad," She said to them.

"Good morning, my princess." Her father said and patted the seat beside him on the couch.

Allison sat beside him. Her mother stood and announced, "I am going to set breakfast on the table." Then she went to the kitchen.

"When did you come last night?" Glen asked his daughter.

Allison heaved a breath as she struggled to determine whether or not they had seen her with Ryan. She didn't even know what had happened last night. She needed to ask Ryan about it. Additionally, she was wondering why her parents didn't wake her up when they reached home.

"I could not remember the time, Dad. I was sleepy, so I returned and went to sleep directly."

He gave her a nod. "We came back late at night, and when we went to check, your lights were off; you were sleeping, so we did not disturb you."

Allison felt relieved. If they somehow saw her with that jacket, it would be a big problem. Her father would have definitely asked her about it.

"How was the pack party, Dad?" She tried to change the topic.

"Yeah, it was good. It was our Gamma's birthday. We had a good time and were about to come back soon but his son stopped us, and we got stuck there. He arranged some games for his father and us. We played and then went for drinks. You know, Alpha Neil and Luna Ella. They did not let us leave before the party ended."

"Oh. It's good that you and Mom enjoyed it."

"Yeah, we did. We have been friends for a long time. So whenever we get time to have her together, we don't miss that. How about you? Did you enjoy your friend's birthday party?"

Her father's question made her recall everything about last night.

The way she danced last night, she felt she was not herself but someone else.

"I did." She mumbled.

"Good. I like it when you try to enjoy your time. It would be best if you went out more often. I want you to develop into a delightful young lady, not a robot that merely carries out the tasks that we assign to her. It is now your turn to experience everything. Because once you are married, you will be expected to take on a great deal of responsibility, and you won't have much time for yourself during that time."

She turned her head towards her father immediately.

"Marriage? Responsibility? What are you talking about, Dad? I am only eighteen."

He chuckled at her. "My princess, when I found your mother as my mate, she was also eighteen. We had just gotten married at the time, and look how far we have come! A cheerful home with a happy family."

Allison lowered her head. If she had heard these things before she was rejected, it would have made her blush or made her pleased. However, today, everything was different. She did not have anyone in her life with whom she could share such a thought, thus the idea of getting married was out of the question for her at the moment.

"Stop talking and come for breakfast. Hurry up."

Her mother's voice reached her ears. She stood up, saying, "Let's go, Dad."

Three of them sat at the table and had their breakfast while exchanging smiles.

"Your semester is coming. How is your study going?"

"Good."

Her father asked, and she replied instantly. It was true that she was studying hard for her exams.

"Luna Ella was talking about you last night." Her mother said.

"Me?" She asked.

"Yeah. She was telling me that you are a hard working girl. You are really doing well in training."

"Really? How did she know?"

"Of course, Ethan told him. Alpha Neil told me so." Her father spoke out.

Allison glanced at her father. She was sure that her father was a fan of Ethan. He always talked about him. He never let out anything wrong about him.

After breakfast, Allison returned to her room. She decided to stay at home today. Because from the next morning, she would have to start her daily schedule again.

She stayed home the whole day and spent her time with her parents.

She wanted to call Ryan to ask about last night. But she prevented her from doing that.

It was nighttime when she came to her room after having dinner with her parents.

She lay on the bed and began to think about last night. She thought about Ryan.

In her eyes, he was not a harmful person. He was just walking in the wrong direction. He needed someone to make things right.

She could not sleep, so she sat up and grabbed her phone. She started to scroll through the timeline of her social media account.

She saw many girls from her school posting about Ethan and Ryan, as usual.

But her eyes fell on a few photos of her and Ryan that were also uploaded there.

They looked very intimate in those photos. It looked like Ryan was hugging her from behind while dancing.

Her jaw dropped when she saw those photos. Someone posted them a few minutes ago.

The caption startled her the most.

"Playboy Alpha Ryan Iversen was spotted with a new chick last night at the Star Night Club."
