

Chapter 420

Allison was taken aback after hearing what Teresa said.

"Where did this come from?" She asked.

"EXACTLY."

"Okay, first calm down, Tess."

"Calm down? How can I calm down? You don't even know what he has done."

Allison heaved a sigh. It was pretty obvious to her that Max had screwed up in some way.

"What did he do again?"

Allison heard the sounds of sobbing. "Tess, why are you crying? We will talk to Max. He will understand you. Don't worry, okay?"

"Allison, he told me that we will leave tomorrow."

"HE WHAT?"

Allison's eyes widened. She could not believe her ears. Teresa was going to leave tomorrow? She would leave this pack? Her?

"No no no. This can't be happening."

"I begged him to change his decision. But suddenly he changed his behavior towards me, Allison. He is not that sweet Max anymore. He told me he has to leave, and if I want to be with him, I will have to move with him."

Allison was really perplexed as to why all of a sudden Max was behaving in that manner. What caused him to make such a snap choice?

"Leaving a pack is not easy. You need to fill out a large amount of paperwork and everything else. How was he able to complete it so quickly?"

"He assured me that he had everything under control, and that I shouldn't be concerned. I think it was his dream to shift abroad. But he never told me this. I am not even prepared. How can he just tell me to leave all of you? He is not even giving me time to digest the fact. From tomorrow on, I won't be able to spend time with you or my parents."

"What did your family say about this?"

"Don't talk about them. They are cold hearted people. They don't care if I stay or leave."

"Why are you saying this? They love you a lot." Allison said.

"No, they love Max more now. I have no idea how he managed my parents. They agreed with him and told me that I should go where my mate wants to go. Because he is my life now."

Allison rubbed her forehead and walked back and forth in the room while talking.

"Let's meet, Tess."

"Let's meet in the club tonight. Max will meet his friends. Ryan will be there too."

"Okay."

"I am going to hang up the phone now. I can't keep up with everything anymore. I think I will kill Max in anger."

"Don't talk nonsense. Everything will be fine. Since your parents permitted you and told you to leave, then you should go with Max." Allison tried to convince her.

After talking with Teresa for a while, Allison left her room. She felt like crying. How would she live without Teresa? She was her best friend. They got together every day, and Teresa was the only person who was there for her during both her good days and her terrible days.

Allison felt that she would be all alone here.

She had never dreamed about shifting abroad. She had never thought to leave the pack and her family for a day. So going out of this pack and starting to live a life that was separated from her parents, was not her wish.

When she went downstairs, she noticed that her parents were sitting on the couch. They glanced at her when she walked up to them.

"Good morning, Mom and Dad." She greeted them and sat on another couch.

"Did you have a good sleep?" Her mother asked.

"Yes, Mom." She replied.

However, her father did not say anything. Allison took a deep breath and got to her feet.

She went to her father and sat next to him.

"Dad, happy birthday."

He did not look at her. His eyes were on the floor.

She gave her mother a quick glance and saw that she was beaming at them both. She stepped up and said to the father and daughter to continue their conversation.

"I am going to prepare lunch."

"Lunch?" Allison was stunned. She took one look at the clock and realized that she had overslept and that she had been so preoccupied with her conversation with Teresa that she had forgotten to check the time.

"Yeah, my child. You sleepy bird told me last night not to disturb your sleep, so I did not go to wake you up. But you missed breakfast." Her mother replied to her while walking to the kitchen.

Allison shook her head and glanced at her father. She rested her head on his shoulder and said,

"Dad, why are you angry with me? Did I do something wrong yesterday?"

"You know that better than me." He replied coldly.

"Dad, believe me. Last night, it was Ethan's fault. He did something that hurt Ryan and-"

"Stop bringing up Ryan in every conversation."

She removed her head from his shoulder and looked at him.

"Why, Dad?"

"I don't want to hear anything about him from you."

Allison frowned when she heard her father's words. She was already upset with Teresa. Now her father was making her more upset with his words.

"Dad, he is not a bad person. As you always say, he stayed away from his family, and he became like this. Soon he will also behave politely with others. I can promise you about it."

Her father turned his head to face her. "What did you say? You are under no obligation to take on the responsibility of molding him into a good person. So stop talking like that. I always warned you about him. But you never listened to me. It would appear that I will need to take some kind of action against you."

"W-What?" She stuttered. She could not believe that her father disliked Ryan so much that he was talking rudely to her.

At that time, her father's phone rang. It was Alpha Neil who had called him.

He received the call.

"Okay, Alpha, I am coming." Her father said and hung the call.

Her mother came out of the kitchen as soon as she heard her father talking with someone on the phone.

"What happened? Where are you going, Glen?" Her mother asked her father.

Allison stood up and waited for her father's reply.

Her father turned to her mother and replied while walking to the door,

"I have to go to the pack house. Alpha Neil has something important to talk about."
