

Chapter 2360 Visiting The Villa

Matthew didn't want to trouble Leanna if he had other options.

Any force would appear weak and insignificant when facing the Nolans.

That made the only forces Matthew could rely on in Cathay were the Banes and Leanna.

Of course, he would never consider relying on the Banes unless there was really no other choice.

He knew very well that even the slightest confrontation could spell disaster if the two behemoths of forces were up against each other in Bainbridge.

"There is too much attention on me at the moment. So, I can only ask you for help. By the way, make sure not to show yourself when you're assigning tasks. Don't give them any chance to figure out who's behind this."

Leanna suddenly became lively when she heard Matthew.

She whispered in his ear with an alluring tone after getting closer to Matthew,

"Are you worried about me?"

She blew warm air against his right ear as she asked.

Matthew immediately jumped slightly in fright as he felt the tingling sensation.

"Leanna, I have other things to attend to, so I won't disturb you."

Matthew hurriedly fled like a frightened rabbit after saying that.

Leanna only murmured as she was left alone in the office,

"Am I really that scary? It's not like I eat people or anything."

Meanwhile, Matthew contacted Albert Reardan's nephew, Eugene Clifford after leaving Acme Tower.

However, Eugene was busy with work in the company, so he sent his assistant over.

"Greetings, Mr. Larson. I am President Clifford's assistant. You can call me Jamie."

Matthew arrived in Southern District following Jamie's lead.

Their current location was not the most prosperous area in Bainbridge. It was considered remote for most people's liking.

But, it was still a luxurious residential area with prices in the tens of millions.

Those who could afford to live here were mostly wealthy and influential figures.

"This is the villa President Clifford has prepared for you, Mr. Larson. The Cloudy Stream Villa. The garden and the villa cover an area of 7 thousand square yards. It may not be as large as you like. But this is the best we currently have on hand. Please make do with it for now. President Clifford promised that he will contact you again should there be even better high-end villas available in the future."

Matthew couldn't help but show a puzzled expression after hearing Jamie.

The villa was worth at least 300 million dollars according to the market's valuation.

Make do? Just what exactly did you mean?

Matthew tentatively asked as he wondered to himself at the same time, "I heard Mr. Yann Cunningham's villa is also around this part, is that right?"

Jamie was an assistant to the president of a large corporation.

Naturally, he knew about this kind of information very well.

"That's true. It's not far from here as well. It's only about a ten-minute drive in distance from here. His villa is not enormous in size, but it was designed by the top villa designer in Cathay, Master Lawson, as his final masterpiece. Thus, it has an extremely high collection value. Its price has increased by nearly 30 million dollars over the past two years. Moreover, Mr. Yann had caused quite a commotion while he was attempting to get the villa for himself. It is said that it even caused casualties. In the end, Old Mr. Cunningham had to personally intervene to resolve the matter."

Jamie had been in the business for many years. So, he knew a thing or two about how to maintain good social relationships. He told Matthew in detail about the events involved when asked about it.

That was exactly the information Matthew needed.

Matthew further confirmed his speculation after listening to Jamie's insight.

Yann valued the villa so much that he even caused casualties when he tried to get it. It didn't make sense that he unhesitatingly gave it to James just like that after all the trouble he went through.

It must be some sort of conspiracy.

Matthew withdrew his thoughts after thinking for a moment.

"What a fantastic villa this is, Jamie. I'll take it."

He took out the black and golden bank card that Leanna had given him and handed it over after saying that.

However, Jamie immediately refused.

"Mr. Larson, President Clifford said that the Cloudy Stream Villa is yours as a gift if you're satisfied with it to make up for the apprenticeship ceremony."
