

Chapter 154: Let's Get Divorced

Liam pressed his lips tightly together. Although he didn't speak, the atmosphere plummeted to its lowest...

Suzy had never seen him like this before, and she instinctively took a step back.

Seemingly realizing he had startled her, Liam's handsome face softened slightly, his voice becoming low and hoarse.

"I don't agree."

"Mr. Park, I understand that this situation has put you in a difficult position, so I'll handle the rest myself. I haven't done anything wrong, and I'm sure I can find a way to prove it."

However, with Park Group's decision to terminate her, she would undoubtedly find herself on the opposing side in arbitration or court proceedings in the future.

So, Suzy wanted to clarify her relationship with Liam first.

"Suzy, come home with me."

Liam's tone was gentle and patient as if coaxing a stubborn wife who had run away from home, a stark contrast to his earlier coldness.

This situation unfolded right at Wendy's doorstep, making Suzy aware that she couldn't stay there with Liam for too long.

Even if Wendy wasn't present at the moment, Liam's prominent status and frequent features on business magazine covers would draw attention.

Things would only get more complicated then!

However, she didn't want to go back with Liam.

"Regarding the penalty for breaching our agreement, you can send it to me via WhatsApp once you've sorted it out on your end. I won't default on it, but today isn't the best time to discuss this, Mr. Park. Would you mind leaving for now?"

It was likely the first time Liam had ever been dismissed like this. Yet, as he glanced up at her, his eyes held not anger, but disappointment.

He thought that after spending this time together, Suzy would at least have a tiny bit of affection for him.

Had Suzy not casually mentioned termination today, Liam might have believed she was beginning to reciprocate his feelings.

"Do you know where I've just come from?"

"Huh?" Suzy was momentarily puzzled by his sudden question.

"I came straight to you from the airport." Liam's slightly wrinkled shirt was evidence of this.

"I haven't eaten anything since noon. Will you accompany me?"

Even though Suzy was uncertain about why Liam abruptly shifted the conversation, his considerable concession made it difficult for her to refuse his request, especially considering his previous kindness towards her.

Suzy hesitated for a moment and nodded. "Okay."

In the end, she got into Liam's car, this time without Alec by their side. It was just the two of them in the car.

They remained silent until they were close to the restaurant, when Liam's phone, placed on the center console, rang.

Suzy instinctively glanced down and noticed it was a message from his father.

"You must marry Sophia! This is not a choice. Your mother's condition has worsened. She attempted to jump from the hospital rooftop earlier. Thankfully, a nurse caught her in time and prevented it! Are you really willing to abandon your mother for that woman?"

Because the message was lengthy, Suzy hadn't finished reading it when Liam took back his phone.

Another minute of silence followed until Suzy spoke up.

"When are you free? Let's go file for divorce."

"What's the reason for the divorce?"

Liam suddenly turned his gaze to her face.

"There's nothing between me and Sophia."

Chapter 155: She's Unworthy

Suzy furrowed her brows.

She wasn't concerned about that!

"I know, you've mentioned it before."

If Liam had feelings for Sophia, many things might not have occurred. However, it appeared that Sophia still harbored resentment toward her.

"Let's eat first," Liam murmured, barely audible, closing the topic again.

He realized that Suzy wasn't in the right frame of mind to listen to him at the moment. She wasn't capable of making rational decisions, and the mention of termination and divorce came out too hastily. So, he chose to ignore them.

Two guards stood outside Grace's hospital room, vigilant for any more impulsive actions from her.

Confident that Liam wasn't at the hospital, Sophia sneaked in to visit Grace.

"Mrs. Park, why did you do something so silly..."

Sophia hugged Mrs. Park as soon as she entered.

"If Liam doesn't want to marry me, that's okay. Please don't pressure him anymore. And please, take care of yourself! I don't want to lose someone who has always cared for me."

Grace, upon hearing this, felt even more displeased with Suzy but touched by Sophia's concern.

"Since I've promised you that you would become my daughter-in-law of, I must keep my word! Sophia, the contributions you and your mother have made to the Park family are invaluable. Liam just doesn't realize it yet."

"You mustn't let him know! Mrs Park, please, don't tell him... I don't want him to marry me out of obligation. You've seen it, Miss Chase is truly important to him. Maybe I should just step aside."

"No! Sophia, that woman is unworthy!" Grace interrupted sharply.

"But Liam really cares about her."

Sophia bit her lip, tears welled up in her eyes again.

"And Miss Chase is actually quite pitiful. I looked into her background after the leak incident. She's been dealing with challenges since childhood, being born out of wedlock and raised by her mother alone.

"It seems she resorted to leaking company secrets just to afford her mother's medical treatment. She's truly a devoted daughter."

Grace snorted. "We all know how mistresses bring ruin to families! So, as the daughter of one, she's definitely not someone good. Just because she's filial, doesn't give her the right to jeopardize the reputation of our entire Park

Group."

Grace grew angrier as she listened to Sophia, wishing she could confront Suzy right away.

Sophia quickly reached out to calm Grace down. "Please calm down. The company has already settled this matter, hasn't it?"

"This is just the surface of the issue. Have you thought deeply about it? How dare this woman... What's her name again? Su... Suzy Chase... commit such moral corruption?"

"Who does she think she is, believing my son will side with her and fix everything for her? How can the company thrive with such an employee?"

Sophia pretended to be surprised and hastily lowered her head. "Maybe she acted out of desperation. It's said her mother's illness is severe and she could die at any moment. As a daughter, Miss Chase might have felt helpless."

"That's her mother's retribution! Sophia, you're too kind. You always see the good in people, but this world is often cruel. My dear child, you must stand firm by my side. For the Park family's sake, we must drive away this Miss Chase!"

Chapter 156: Make Suzy Leave

Sophia didn't respond to Grace's "plea."

She simply lowered her eyelids, appearing convincingly torn.

"Mrs. Park, if we do this, Liam will resent us... He might be even more reluctant to marry me, and we might not even stay friends."

"I understand, I understand everything! You don't need to do anything. Since I've promised you this marriage, I'll handle everything ahead."

Grace naturally understood Sophia's concerns.

If Sophia intervened too much in breaking up Liam and Suzy, even if she were to marry Liam later on, Liam would still harbor resentment towards her as his wife!

He would see her as a troublemaker, thinking she had ulterior motives.

This wouldn't be conducive to the development of their relationship as husband and wife in the future!

However, if Grace were to handle all these dirty deeds, it would be different!

Liam couldn't keep holding a grudge against his own mother.

Sophia succeeded in her goal today: she manipulated Grace into aiding her plan to separate Liam and Suzy!

However, Sophia had to keep pretending to appear convincing.

She looked worriedly at Grace. "And don't let this ruin your relationship with your son! Mrs. Park, I'm unworthy of you to do this for me."

"I think you're worthy! Should I just watch my son get deceived by that woman? Does she think she can be part of our family?" Grace sneered. "In her dream!"

"Mrs. Park, thank you for always supporting me! No matter what happens between Liam and me in the future, I'll always regard you as my own mother."

Grace nodded in satisfaction, then her expression froze suddenly, and she raised an eyebrow.

"Oh, by the way, you mentioned earlier... that woman's mother is seriously ill?"

"Yes."

Though Grace didn't say anything more, after Sophia left, she made a phone call.

"Go thoroughly investigate the mother of Suzy Chase."

She knew her son well enough!

Perhaps forcing him to let go would indeed damage their relationship, but if she could find a way to make Suzy willingly step back, severing all ties with her son, even disappearing entirely, then it would change the situation!

Everything would be easier then.

In the restaurant, Liam sat opposite Suzy, facing her.

Even after a hectic day, he effortlessly ordered a table full of Suzy's favorite foods.

Suzy realized that Liam truly understood her better than she had imagined.

However, the more he did, the more absurd she found this situation to be.

What if Liam suddenly asked her to swallow her pride for the sake of Park Group and his feelings for her?

What should she do?

Would she really ruin her future and accept a sugar baby role?

"What about the project in New Valley?" Suzy sensed the awkward atmosphere and brought up a topic.

Liam looked up at her, his lips barely moving. "There aren't any major issues with the project, and your name hasn't been removed."

Suzy was stunned, bewildered. "Not removed? But Park Group has already announced my dismissal—"

"I didn't say you were fired. Others' words don't count."

"But that's your father! The chairman of Park Group!"

William was an important figure in the Park Group!

"It seems you still don't trust me." Liam's tone grew heavier, his voice slow. "Before you leave, I promised to handle this matter and give you a satisfactory explanation."

Suzy furrowed her brows, wanting to argue, but ultimately remained silent.

How could she not trust him?

She did want to trust him!

However, how could she still trust him after the internal announcement was made?

Chapter 157: Your Mother Looks for My Mother

"Mr. Park, I understand you're trying to be fair, and I appreciate that. But I'd prefer to deal with this issue by myself."

Liam found the term "Mr. Park" rather unsettling.

"Suzy, we are husband and wife."

...

Observing her silence, Liam felt an indescribable sensation. They stared at each other for a long time, neither breaking eye contact.

Finally, Suzy spoke, "Liam, the gap between us is just too big."

"I am willing to get closer to you to fill the gap."

Suzy shook her head. "Can you really disregard your parents for me?"

Liam pursed his lips, wanting to respond, but remained silent.

Suddenly, Suzy's phone rang.

Glancing down, she saw her mother's number.

She answered immediately, and Melissa's voice came through.

"You mentioned you registered your marriage with someone named Jeffrey Palmer. So why did a woman called Mrs. Park visit me today, claiming to be his mother, and asking my daughter to stop contacting her son?"

Suzy's heart sank.

"Mom..."

"Come see me right now."

With that statement, Melissa hung up abruptly, leaving no room for negotiation.

Suzy couldn't focus on eating with Liam anymore. Her expression changed, and she stood up, ready to leave.

Realizing the gravity of the situation, Liam quickly followed. "I'll go with you."

She looked up at him.

"Your mother went to the hospital to see mine."

Liam was taken aback by her remark.

"Mr. Park, all I want is for my mother to live in peace. Please advise Miss Burns and your mother not to harass us further."

With that, she left the restaurant without looking back.

At that moment, Liam understood what Suzy meant by the "gap."

...

Upon arriving at the hospital by taxi, Suzy immediately noticed the gloomy expression on Melissa's face as soon as she stepped into her room.

There was silence, yet the tension in the air was noticeable.

Suzy had thought of many excuses on the way to try to keep her mother in the dark, but upon seeing her, she couldn't bring herself to utter any lies.

"Mom, I'm sorry..." Suzy began, but Melissa looked up at her with eyes full of disappointment.

"Do you know why I'm so worried about you being deceived by men? Do you know why I'd rather not have surgery, why I'd rather die than see you bowing down to men for money?"

Suzy nodded silently.

"I've made too many mistakes in my life, and regrets are useless now. All I want is for my only daughter not to follow in my footsteps! But you... you've truly disappointed me."

Melissa's tone was calm, unlike her usual emotional outbursts, but Suzy would have preferred her mother to scold her or even slap her rather than see her like this.

The quietness made her feel uneasy.

"Mom, please forgive me this time. From now on, I'll tell you everything and never deceive you again! I was truly afraid of losing you, so I made this choice in a moment of desperation."

Suddenly, Melissa looked at her daughter and asked in a low voice, "What's your relationship with this Jeffrey?"

"Just friends..."

"I can see that he genuinely cares for you."

Melissa hadn't been overly tough on Jeffrey Palmer. She had thought of several ways to assess him, but ultimately, she only employed one or two methods because she trusted Jeffrey's sincerity.

However, she never imagined that her daughter had brought him to deceive her!

If the Park family hadn't sought her out today, she would still be in the dark, oblivious to everything...

"He's Wendy's cousin, and he's been quite caring towards me."

"Cut ties with that Mr. Park." Melissa thought of the woman who had just come to her, and her anger flared up.

Grace displayed an arrogant demeanor, acting like she was above Melissa.

No matter what, Melissa would never allow her daughter to marry into such a family.

"I'll handle this matter, Mom. You don't have to worry. The Park family won't bother you anymore."

"Do you think I care about such matters?" Melissa looked at her, her tone filled with resignation and displeasure. "I care about you."

Suzy lowered her head. She didn't want to bring up too much about Liam in front of her mother because there were still things she hadn't sorted out herself.

Of course, Melissa noticed her daughter's avoidance.

"Suzy, do you have feelings for this Mr. Park?"

Suzy was startled. "No, Mom!"

"Really?" Melissa's eyes kept scanning her daughter's face as if trying to see through her.

"Mom, we come from different worlds. As you've seen, the Park family's standards are far above what I can reach. I understand that completely, so I don't entertain any inappropriate feelings for him."

She said this not only for her mother's sake but also for her own.

No matter how one viewed the disparity between herself and Liam, it was hard to envision any future for them; they were worlds apart.

"That would be best."

For once, Melissa refrained from pressuring her daughter into making any promises, merely nodding faintly.

...

Upon returning to her hospital room, Grace immediately called Sophia.

"My dear, don't worry. I've spoken to that woman's mother. From her demeanor, she seems clueless about what her daughter is up to!

"I've warned her not to delude herself into thinking her daughter can climb the ladder through Liam. If she wants her daughter to enter our family, she'll have to wait until I'm gone."

Sophia replied gently to Grace, "Mrs. Park, if you visit Suzy's mother like that, you'll likely prompt Suzy to tell Liam. That could impact your relationship with him, and that's not what I want. I should have kept this to myself.

Her words were tactful.

By saying this, regardless of the outcome, Grace wouldn't feel manipulated by Sophia. Instead, Grace would perceive Sophia as considerate, someone who took their mother-son relationship into account!

"If you hadn't told me, how would I have found a way to pressure this Suzy woman to back off? Sophia, tell me the truth, do you really like my son? Do you want to be my daughter-in-law?"

"Well, of course I—yes, I do." Sophia's voice trailed off, her tone tinged with resignation.

"After all these years, I've come to regard you and Mr. William as my own parents. I aspire to be part of the Park family, yet I also don't wish for Liam to forsake his true love."

"Even at this point, you're still thinking on his behalf. My foolish son is truly blinded by that Suzy woman!" Grace's words were cut off as the door to the hospital room suddenly swung open.

Looking up, she saw Liam entering!

Grace instinctively ended the call, but to her surprise, her son stepped forward and took the phone from her hand.

The speed was so quick that she didn't even manage to disconnect the call...

With a stern expression on his handsome face, Liam glanced at the number on the screen before placing the phone aside and speaking in a deep voice.

"I will never marry Miss Burns. The one I want has always been Suzy Chase."

Chapter 159: File a Divorce

Upon hearing Liam's clear statement, not only did Sophia fall into silence on the other end of the line, but even Grace didn't expect her son to express himself so definitively in front of her!

Grace's greatest assurance was her son's filial piety.

She believed her son was just trying to assert himself, but as long as she persisted, he would surely comply with her wishes.

"Both of you don't need to discuss anything privately anymore. It's pointless," Liam said before ending the call with Sophia.

The atmosphere in the hospital room became quiet, descending to an icy silence.

After a while, Grace moved her lips slightly, "For that woman, you're willing to disregard your mother's well-being?"

"Mom, I can compromise on everything else."

"There's nothing else! I won't allow this Suzy woman to enter the Park family! It's either her or me!"

Grace's emotions escalated, and before she could finish her sentence, her breathing became rapid.

Her heart monitor emitted a piercing sound, prompting the doctors outside to rush in for emergency treatment.

Liam furrowed his brow and immediately accompanied the doctor in rushing his mother to the emergency room.

This marked the third time Grace had been rushed in just a few days.

Her attending physician specifically requested a meeting with Liam in the emergency room.

"I've repeatedly emphasized that the patient cannot handle emotional upheavals right now, so why did you provoke her?"

Liam remained silent, his tall figure standing steadfastly in front of the bench.

"To ensure the patient's recovery, both doctors and family members need to collaborate. Otherwise, if any mishap occurs, the hospital cannot be held responsible."

The doctor sighed, unable to delve further.

"Your mother's condition is truly severe. She often engages in self-harming behavior. Before I conduct any psychological counseling sessions with her, I have to play soothing music and speak cautiously to avoid triggering her."

These were words Liam had heard from many other doctors abroad.

Without this, he wouldn't have even entertained the idea of marrying Sophia at his mother's suggestion.

At that time, he hadn't crossed paths with Suzy again, only thinking of stabilizing his mother's condition first!

But now...

He intentionally included Suzy in the family register, so why would he be willing to give up now?

Liam had been waiting outside the emergency room until his phone suddenly rang.

It was Suzy!

She rarely took the initiative to contact him.

However, at this time, it was likely not good news if she was reaching out.

Hesitating for a moment, he pressed the answer button.

"Mr. Park, are you free tomorrow?"

"No."

"What about the day after?"

Liam's thick eyebrows furrowed; he knew what Suzy intended to do, even though she hadn't said it yet.

"I'm quite busy recently."

"Can't you spare about half an hour? I want to go file a divorce."

Suzy's voice was calm, almost as if she was discussing the weather instead of divorce!

To this day, she had not fully realized Liam's persistence.

He knew that to make Suzy truly fall in love with him, there was a long road ahead, and marriage was just the first step.

There were more hurdles to overcome.

Liam remained silent, not saying a word.

"Mr. Park? Liam?"

"Did your mother give you a hard time?"

"...No, she's just angry."

Liam raised his hand to rub his forehead.

"Can you arrange a meeting with her for me?"

Chapter 160: For One Woman

"What are you planning to do?" Suzy asked in a trembling voice.

For Suzy, Liam's social status was ultimately too far out of reach, creating undeniable pressure and leaving her feeling insecure.

Because even if she tried every trick in her book, she couldn't really hurt Liam; it was all futile. However, if he chose to retaliate against her, it would be effortless.

Furthermore, she had to compete with Sophia, which was also proving to be a strenuous effort.

Her reactive response hurt Liam a bit.

"I will never hurt you, nor your family."

"My mother must avoid any emotional stress because of her illness. Please don't meet with her."

Suzy was now truly afraid to let Liam meet Melissa!

That would be the end of her.

"Suzy, can you not..."

Liam's voice trailed off midway, the rest swallowed by silence.

Suzy waited a moment before saying, "Go on."

"Can you not think of divorce first whenever a problem arises?"

Liam's voice was soft, filled with a mix of emotions, making it hard to pinpoint what he was truly emphasizing.

He seemed lost, resigned, with a hint of pleading, mixed with a touch of reluctance.

"Our marriage was always quite absurd, the combination of a mere employee and the CEO of Park Group. It sounds like a joke, doesn't it? And as you've seen, it's caused a lot of trouble, disrupting both your life and mine. I just feel... we need to get back on track."

Back on track?

Could he even do that?

"What if I don't agree to a divorce?"

"Mr. Park, your mother strongly opposes any interaction between us. She even went to the extent of threatening my mother at the hospital!

"I don't know what else she might do in the future, but her disdain for me is crystal clear. There's no need for us to go against her wishes."

"And who cares about my wishes?"

Suzy was taken aback by his remark.

Liam let out a faint, almost inaudible sigh.

"Terminating the contract involves many considerations, and calculating the penalty for breach of contract will take time. I'll get in touch with you later."

With that, he ended the call abruptly.

For now, he didn't want to dwell on this topic. He didn't want to hear the word 'divorce' again.

"Liam!"

Suddenly, William's voice echoed from the other end of the hospital corridor.

Liam turned to speak, but before he could utter a word, his father delivered a fierce slap.

The sound reverberated crisply through the empty corridor.

"How much further are you willing to push this? Will you only be content if your mother ends up dead?"

William had never laid a finger on his son before, because he had always been obedient and easy to deal with! Whether it was his academic performance in school or his career now, he had always been outstanding.

But this time!

All for a woman!

He drove his own biological mother into the emergency room several times!

"Don't push me to lay a hand on that Suzy. I'm giving you and her a chance."

William had returned to the country this time intending to have a good chat with his son. He was a man too, he had been young once, so he understood the difficulty of letting go of someone he loved.

However, just as he got off the plane, he received news of his wife being critically ill again, so he couldn't control himself!

Liam tightly pressed his lips together. Faced with his father's anger, he didn't retreat or show any signs of wavering.

"Do you really think that just because Park Group is in your hands, I won't touch Suzy?"

"If you think hurting her will resolve everything, you will regret it."

Liam's words were firm, without a hint of compromise after being threatened.

"You—"

Chapter 161: Pressure

William raised his hands, about to act impulsively.

However, when he saw the determination in his son's eyes, he suddenly backed down.

Even if he were to kill Liam today, he knew Liam wouldn't compromise.

"Son, your mother's life is in your hands now."

...

Liam would rather his father hit him, and curse at him, but when he spoke with a pleading tone, Liam truly didn't know how to respond.

"She had a difficult time giving birth to you. I still remember her crying so painfully in the hospital and insisting she must save you!"

William looked at him, his gaze heavy.

"I understand you're reluctant to give up. You love that girl deeply, but Grace is your mother! She brought you into this world, she risked her life for you! Are these things less important than the girl you love?"

"Isn't there any way to make her accept Suzy?"

In fact, Liam was persistent because he felt that his mother simply hadn't yet understood Suzy.

Once she truly got to know Suzy, she would like her!

William sighed.

"Your mother will only accept Sophia as her daughter-in-law."

"Why?"

"Do you remember the time your mother was kidnapped? Do you know that if it weren't for Sophia, your mother would have been dead?"

Liam was stunned. He guessed there must be other reasons why his mother insisted on Sophia, but he didn't expect it to be related to that kidnapping incident.

"I'd rather not bring up this matter again, let alone dwell on it. I've told you all you need to know! The decision is yours to make now, and how you choose is up to you! I believe even if I were to intervene again, you still won't give in."

After saying this, William went to find his wife's attending physician, leaving his son behind, who remained motionless for a long time.

On Suzy's end, she had finally calmed Melissa down, but her own thoughts were in turmoil.

It wasn't only Sophia's framing that troubled her, but there were also some other factors...

After Melissa fell asleep, Suzy went downstairs alone to the garden to take a walk and get some fresh air when her phone rang.

She looked down at her phone and realized the call was from Alec.

"Miss Chase, Mr. Park has already taken down the announcement. You can go back to work as usual, and your name is on the New Valley project too!"

He sounded genuinely happy, and Suzy sensed his eagerness to share the news, anticipating her happiness upon hearing it.

Suzy fell silent for a moment. "Until things are investigated thoroughly, I don't think I should have my name on anything."

This time, Alec didn't immediately respond but paused for a very long time.

"Do you realize the amount of pressure Mr. Park has faced regarding this issue?"

Suzy kept quiet.

"Honestly, I've been by Mr. Park's side for many years, and I've never seen him make special arrangements for anyone!

"He's a businessman who prioritizes profit in everything, but this time, he's taken such a big risk by not removing your name. How can you casually say you don't want your name on it?"

Suzy furrowed her brows. "He didn't consult me. If he did, I wouldn't let him do this."

"Are you, perhaps, a bit too self-centered?" There was disappointment in Alec's tone.

"Suzy, I didn't think you were this kind of person before."

Suzy was speechless.

"Yes, Mr. Park made this decision without consulting you. You might feel like I'm pressuring you today, pushing you to accept Mr. Park's favor! But have you considered that ever since the incident with Sophia, Mr. Park has been trying his best to help you?

"In fact, he could have ignored your grievances, the injustice you're facing, and even avoided getting involved altogether, simply by claiming he was busy with work or business trips!"

Chapter 162: Break Up with Liam

Suzy stood next to the bench in the garden, considering speaking several times, but in the end, she remained silent.

"Do you truly believe that, with your abilities and resources, you can prove that Miss Burns framed you?"

"I believe justice will prevail."

"You, your family, and your friends may believe in your innocence, but no HR department in any investment bank will believe you! If you're dismissed for this reason, no one will care whether you're innocent or not."

Alec had just spoken the entire truth.

After years in the workplace, he had seen all sorts of schemes and plots!

It was not uncommon for a superior to intentionally create trouble for a subordinate due to personal grievances.

As a result, those unlucky ones might bear the burden for the rest of their lives, while luckier ones may only witness their superior receiving a mild reprimand from management before the subordinate leaves the industry due to the company's overall reputation.

Top of Form

Regardless of the outcome, it was always those who lacked power that suffered the most!

Seeing Suzy remain silent, Alec suddenly sighed.

"Suzy, Mr. Park hasn't rested in nearly 48 hours..."

He hung up the phone, unsure of what else he could say.

At this point, it was obvious to everyone how much Liam favored Suzy!

She remained stiff for a while, then sat down on the bench.

In her mind, all she could hear were Alec's words.

"Are you perhaps a bit too self-centered?"

Too self-centered...

Suddenly, Suzy realized that she had never looked at a problem from Liam's point of view before.

Just as he had said, whenever she encountered difficulties, her first thought was to distance herself from him as quickly as possible, then naively believe that she could clear her name on her own. Worse, she had even doubted Liam before.

Her mind was in turmoil now, a chaotic mess that she couldn't make sense of.

It felt as if Liam's feelings had suddenly overwhelmed her like a mountain! She realized that his affection for her ran much deeper than she had previously thought.

And to think, before all of this, Suzy had never been romantically involved with anyone.

"Suzy, I finally found you."

Suddenly, a man approached her with large strides.

As he approached, she recognized him as the man who had been with Sophia at the time of Liam's accident.

His name was... Clive Grey.

"Do you need something?" Her voice was cold and clear, clearly indicating her reluctance to engage in conversation with him.

However, Clive looked at her very seriously, took a deep breath, and said, "I'm here today to advise you to take the initiative to break up with Liam."

"This is my business."

Suzy didn't like feeling pressured by others.

"You don't have to be so sensitive. Although I don't have any goodwill towards you, I don't have any malice either. I just want to tell you that Liam has done too much for you. Now he's in a dilemma, and I think you should do something for him too."

"Are you siding with Sophia?"

"I'm not siding with anyone at the moment! There's no need for you to be hostile towards me. Liam and I have been good friends for many years, and he confides in me things he doesn't share with others."

Seeing Suzy clearly didn't believe him, he went straight to the point.

"For example, do you remember Mr. Watts from Far East Corporation? Well, the day Liam learned you were going alone, he became worried about your safety. He immediately brought me along to rescue you."

Suzy was speechless.

"Have you never wondered how he managed to arrive right on time?"
