

Chapter 476 Indifference

Camila had completely forgotten that she had penned those words.

Recollections flooded her mind—how she had a heated argument with Marvin and stormed out in anger. It had been a rainy day, and she ended up drenched. Upon Harland's return, he found her alone and sheltered her with an umbrella.

Back then, she had thought Harland to be incredibly charming.

He possessed a gentle and caring demeanor.

At the time, she must have been around fourteen or fifteen years old, just beginning to experience the stirrings of affection.

And so, she had written down her joyful emotions.

Now, the thought of it made her blush with embarrassment.

How could she have done such a thing?

Now she finally understood why Isaac had always seemed peculiar. It was all because of this.

But when had he read it?

Upon reflection, she realized it had been in the study, where he could have perused it at any time.

Now it seemed she would have to dispose of it and explain everything to Isaac clearly.

It was something she had written when she was still young.

She rose from her seat, intending to throw it out. She didn't want Isaac to be upset.

Just as she was about to do so, a dark figure darted past the partially opened door.

Unaware of this, she proceeded to exit the room. At that moment, her child began to cry. She couldn't discern whether it was due to hunger or a soiled diaper. Pushing the door open, she discovered Rowena attending to his hygiene. Camila offered to prepare the bottle.

"Go and get some rest. I'll take care of it," Rowena suggested.

Camila replied, "I've come downstairs. Let me feed him."

"Alright," Rowena said.

Rowena went to clean the diaper while Camila prepared the formula.

The baby dozed off while being fed.

With her little one cradled in her arms, Camila lay down.

She gently caressed her son, slowly succumbing to slumber.

When Rowena returned, she noticed Camila had already fallen asleep. Thus, she chose not to disturb her.

Upstairs Isaac perched on the edge of the bed, his gaze fixed on the moonlit scene, his posture erect.

He was the one who had passed by the study just moments ago.

He noticed when Camila rose from the bed.

He was aware that Camila hadn't fallen asleep.

He silently trailed behind her as she made her way downstairs, curious to see what she was up to.

She went to retrieve the diary, unaware of his presence.

Was she missing her past?

Did she harbor hatred towards him now?

She couldn't even bear to sleep in the same bed as him?

Isaac bowed his head and kneaded his forehead hard!

For the first time, he felt powerless.

Younglove was supposed to be unforgettable and beautiful, wasn't it?

He was consumed by jealousy and helplessness.

Why had he appeared so late?

The morning sunlight streamed in.

Isaac was dressed in a sharp suit, exuding an air of competence and aloofness.

At the dining table, he spoke. "I might need to go on a business trip for about two weeks."

Camila was confused. "What's the matter? Do you have to go there?"

"I have business matters to attend to at the Clouland head office," Isaac replied nonchalantly.

"I'll pack your things later," Camila offered, gazing at him.

"No, just ask Glenda to do it. After breakfast, I'll take you to the hospital." He set down his napkin. Then he stood up and left the dining room.

Camila sensed that something was wrong with him.

It must be about the diary.

Setting aside her food, she followed him outside, calling out, "Isaac..."

Just then, Isaac's phone suddenly rang.

He answered the call—it was from Alick. There was an urgent matter at the company that required his attention.

After ending the call, he stated, "I'll have the driver take you to the hospital."

Camila looked at him and inquired "Are you busy?"

"It's something urgent." He then summoned the driver.

Isaac didn't give Camila an opportunity to speak. He escorted her into the car and swiftly drove away.

Isaac's indifference left Camila feeling uneasy.

Upon arriving at the hospital, instead of getting off, she instructed the driver to head to the company.

She needed to see Isaac and clarify things between them!