

Chapter 478 The Fire

At eight o'clock in the evening Isaac had yet to return. Camila attempted to call him, but he didn't answer. Upon inquiring with Alick, she discovered that Isaac had left without informing her.

Camila's emotions were in turmoil.

Consequently, she couldn't fall asleep that night. She gazed at her cellphone, hoping for his call.

However, Isaac didn't reach out to her. Instead, she received a call from the hospital.

"Excuse me, are you a friend or family member of Forrest?"

Camila was bewildered and asked, "Who is this?"

"This is the emergency center. We found your contact number in the patient's phone. If you're his family, please come over."

Camila furrowed her brow and inquired "Did something bad happen to him?"

"There was a fire. They were all injured. They are currently at the emergency center."

Camila responded, "I understand. I'll be right there."

She swiftly got up, got dressed, and instructed the driver to take her to the hospital.

At night, there were few cars on the road, and they arrived quickly.

The driver followed Camila in a hurry.

After asking, she learned that they were still in the examination room and operating room.

She couldn't see them at that moment.

All she could do was wait.

Around four o'clock in the morning Camila finally caught sight of Forrest. He had a large burn on his arm, which had been treated. He was lying weakly on the bed.

"What happened?"

Camila felt strange. The Walters family resided in a standalone villa. When it was renovated, there should have been a fire alarm. Even if the fire alarm had failed, escaping wouldn't have been difficult. After all, it wasn't a high rise building.

Forrest had fallen into a deep sleep. When he woke up amidst the smoke, he felt weak all over.

As a former doctor, he understood that his health was not in good condition.

However, he didn't have time to dwell on it at the moment. He escorted Laura out, and in the process of saving his mother, he sustained burns.

"I don't know exactly how it happened. The police have conducted an investigation," Forrest explained.

Camila asked, "Where is Laura? Why haven't I seen her?"

"Don't worry. She's fine. She's just frightened and unconscious. She hasn't regained consciousness yet. You can visit her later and offer comfort," Forrest assured.

"Is she so scared that she fainted?" Camila furrowed her brow. Laura used to work as a forensic expert, dealing with all sorts of corpses every day. How could she be frightened to the point of fainting from a fire?

Laura was not someone easily scared.

She could handle such situations calmly.

How could she have fainted out of fear?

It seemed unbelievable!

Could memory loss alter a person's character?

"What are you thinking about?" Forrest asked, noticing Camila's absent-mindedness.

"Nothing," Camila replied.

"You should go back and rest. You just underwent surgery and need rest to recover," Forrest suggested.

"I'll go back after I see Laura," Camila insisted.

"How about I arrange another bed for you so you can rest for a while?" Forrest proposed.

Camila declined. She intended to stay for a short while and then leave after visiting Laura.

Forrest got out of bed.

"Where are you going?" she inquired.

"I'm going to see my mother," Forrest explained. He had saved Laura first, and then his mother got burned when he went to rescue her.

His mother's injuries were severe, and he needed to check on her to ease his worries.

"You can go ahead," Camila said, nodding her head.

Half an hour later, when Laura regained consciousness, Camila went to visit her.
