

Chapter 483 I Want To Kiss You

Forrest remained highly cautious of Aldrin's presence.

After all, Laura had been close to Aldrin before her memory loss.

Forrest wasn't sure if Laura had romantic feelings for Aldrin, but it was widely known that Aldrin had feelings for her.

Positioning himself protectively, Forrest pulled Laura behind him, his eyes filled with wariness and hostility. "Why are you here?"

Aldrin paid no attention to him and simply stated, "I didn't come here to see you."

Forrest's eyes narrowed, and he responded coldly, "I warn you not to manipulate Laura."

"Huh." Aldrin sneered, "Do you intend to take advantage of her memory loss? Listen, I'll expose everything you've done to her in the past..."

"Lunatic." Forrest retorted, then swiftly guided Laura towards the car. He told her, "Don't believe his lies."

Without saying a word, Laura turned around and took a look at Aldrin.

Aldrin was impulsive. It pained him to witness Laura being taken away by Forrest. He took a step forward, ready to argue with Forrest, but Laura halted him with a stern gaze.

He was stunned.

"Laura..."

Laura interrupted, "Don't come near me again."

Aldrin remained motionless.

Forrest opened the car door and ushered Laura inside.

filled with wariness and hostility. "Why are you here?"

Aldrin paid no attention to him and simply stated, "I didn't come here to see you."

Forrest's eyes narrowed, and he responded coldly, "I warn you not to manipulate Laura."

"Huh." Aldrin sneered, "Do you intend to take advantage of her memory loss? Listen, I'll expose everything you've done to her in the past..."

"Lunatic." Forrest retorted, then swiftly guided Laura towards the car. He told her, "Don't believe his lies."

Without saying a word, Laura turned around and took a look at Aldrin.

Aldrin was impulsive. It pained him to witness Laura being taken away by Forrest. He took a step forward, ready to argue with Forrest, but Laura halted him with a stern gaze.

He was stunned.

"Laura..."

Laura interrupted, "Don't come near me again."

Aldrin remained motionless.

Forrest opened the car door and ushered Laura inside.

"Where are we going?" Laura inquired.

"To the company. I have some work to attend to," Forrest replied, starting the engine.

Laura asked with a frown, "Then why are you taking me there?"

"I want to be with you at all times."

Forrest freed one hand to hold hers, adding, "You don't have much to do at home, so just stay with me at the company. After I finish my work, I'll take you to enjoy some delicious food."

In truth, he was worried that Aldrin might reveal their past to Laura.

Even though she had lost her memory, Aldrin's words could instill doubt within her.

That would undoubtedly affect their relationship.

It had been a hard-won opportunity for Forrest to start afresh with Laura, and he wouldn't allow anyone to ruin it.

Laura was well aware of this and asked deliberately, "Are you worried that person might say something to me?"

"How could that be?" Forrest quickly denied. "He's young and doesn't know how to handle things properly. I'm concerned about your well-being"

Laura silently believed that Forrest was the one who could potentially hurt her.

But she didn't let it show on her face. Instead, she smiled and said, "I will trust you. I won't see him again or pay attention to his rumors and nonsense"

"Okay." Forrest felt satisfied as he held her hand.

"Drive safely." She gently pulled her hand back.

Forrest gripped the steering wheel with both hands and replied, "Don't worry. I'm good at driving"

Laura leaned back lazily.

Upon reaching the company, Laura settled on the sofa while Forrest attended to his business

She idly played with her mobile phone, searching for information on what to do after getting burnt.

She learned that spicy, irritating food, and seafood were not recommended. They could trigger allergies and irritation, causing the wound to swell and itch during the healing process.

Raising her eyebrows, Laura informed Forrest, "I want to have seafood hotpot for dinner tonight."

Forrest glanced up and smiled affectionately. "Sure."

Laura smiled. "You're so good to me."

"If you ask for my life, I would gladly give it to you," he said.

Laura found his remark amusing and jokingly replied, "Then give me your life!"

"Come and claim it." He reached out to her, saying, "Come here."

Laura complied and approached him.

As she looked at his broad palm, she hesitated but reluctantly placed her hand in his.

Forrest held her hand and gently pulled her into his embrace. Laura resisted inwardly and couldn't help but attempt to pull away.

However, Forrest held her tighter, calling her name softly. "Laura."

Lowering her head, Laura asked, "What are you doing?"

"I want to kiss you," Forrest whispered, leaning closer until their cheeks were touching

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.

