

197 The scorpion

Not even a level one beast rose. This stillness lasted for about a full hour until some sounds of falling rocks were heard in the abyss. Then a claw appeared on the plain, and then the body of an entirely black scorpion appeared on the plain, hissing into nothingness. 1

The scorpion emerged from the abyss with a colossal wingspan, its dimensions expanding the sense of grandeur. Its completely black body extended approximately four meters in length, from the sharp tips of its front claws to the end of its tail. The claws, in turn, were about one meter wide each, standing out as formidable attack instruments.

The scorpion's muscular, jointed legs contributed to its commanding stature, each of them stretching more than two meters, giving it the appearance of a colossal creature. The tail, ending in a poisonous sting, added another meter to the scorpion's total length, giving it a truly imposing presence on the plain.

That wasn't even the most impressive thing.

With his ridiculously great spiritual sense, Kayden could feel the worst part. At least it was the worst part for most people. Kayden smiled expectantly.

"He is in the sixth rank." Locke looked at him in surprise. His spiritual sense reached 150 meters, which was ridiculously large, but Kayden was sensing the scorpion at a much greater distance than him.

The boy's speech took away several emotions from the students. Some were scared, others just accepted defeat without blinking. It didn't seem like anything could be done at this point. It was too big a leap for them to cover.

"Battalion 1, you must do earth spells to close that scorpion within an area. Battalion two, rain spells to delay the scorpion." Locke gave orders before morale fell too low.

In the next few minutes, the scorpion just stood still as he received dozens of spells such as fireballs, iron needles, and ice spikes. Nothing could even pierce his armor, he just stood still.

Meanwhile, a large earthen wall was erected, isolating the scorpion's escape routes. Furthermore, almost a hundred students were on top of this wall looking at the animal.

Meanwhile, Kayden was observing the beast and was shocked by the quality of the animal's defense. The spells barely managed to scratch his armor, they couldn't even make him move. Kayden had never seen such a robust defense.

"Something is wrong." Locke was the first to notice this. "That's not a scorpion from the abyss." The spells kept raining down on the beast, even Kayden let out lightning and the scorpion didn't even move.

"Magicians, try to disconnect the scorpion from that piece of land." Several people began to dig around the scorpion using spells and finally, it showed some movement.

"He's connected to the earth in some way, I can feel a small flow of mana leaving him and the ground every time a spell touches his armor."

After Locke said this, Kayden paid attention and was able to notice.

The scorpion was patching up the land around him and stopping the spells from turning the area around him into a small floating island. The scorpion seemed to master the earth element perfectly, walls and walls were erected almost instantly.

The wall the students were on began to shake like crazy, forcing everyone to float before they were knocked down. Second, the wall they erected fell as if it were nothing next to the scorpion's control.

"Linus, use that special attack. All battalions continue attacking him without stopping. Luan, it will take you away from the connection with the earth." Luan managed to reach the third wizard level like Locke, but Kayden remembered him being a wizard specializing in physical strength.

Luan went close to the scorpion with his huge sword. Kayden still didn't understand how he was going to get the scorpion off the ground. A gale seemed to start near Luan, the wind was extremely chaotic around him.

He was waiting for Linus to launch his attack, and within a few minutes, Linus was ready with an orange ball in his hand. The mana density in this ball was ridiculously high, it was at least 10 times stronger than when he was at the apprentice level.

When she received Locke's signal, Luan concentrated all the winds on her sword and a whirlwind appeared above her. The prince warned Linus that he would only have an opening of a few milliseconds.

A tornado came out of Luan's sword at high speed. Even Kayden, who was several dozen meters away, could feel the absurd suction of the spell. As soon as it got close to the scorpion, it took effect and the beast began to levitate along with the block of earth it was on.

BOOOM!

Linus cast his spell and it opened up a mushroom-like cloud of smoke, at the base it looked like a sun was on the earth, there wasn't even a living strand of grass left, plus the earth had sunk at least a few feet.

'shit' Kayden felt with his spiritual sense that the scorpion received some damage from this attack, but the problem was that he threw himself against Luan at a bizarre speed while using a piece of stone as support.

BOOOM!

In the middle of the smoke, lightning fell on the scorpion, but unfortunately, Kayden didn't have time to gather mana and he was just normal, causing almost no damage against the scorpion.

Instantly upon arriving close to Luan, he used a tail attack that would have split the boy in two, but fortunately, the fourth kingdom teacher took Luan out before it was too late.

Kayden ran towards the beast without any fear and began to pull all the mana in the environment towards him, right behind him was Locke using the momentum of the royal family's secret techniques.

The first attack to reach the scorpion was an aura cut from Kayden carrying all the mana he could suck, it was the biggest aura attack he had ever launched, the attack came at a frightening speed and there was no time for the scorpion to react. connect to earth.
