

237 The birth of the pinnacle [3]

He was bleeding and had several broken bones. Furthermore, one of his legs was missing, making his appearance completely miserable. Even so, his eyes remained calm and unwavering. 1

"What is he still doing there?" Helmer spoke to himself out loud. That was the question that was on everyone's mind. After a few seconds, mana gathered around Kayden, showing its intentions.

"Kayden!! Get out of there, you've done enough!" Azir broke any etiquette and social rules he had and intervened in Kayden's test. This had never happened in the history of this organization.

Kayden didn't even turn to respond. Those at the top of the world only heard his low voice.

"In the end, all the dead are buried in the same earth. I'm not going to be just another ordinary wizard," Kayden said the phrase that expressed his thoughts exactly. After that, he closed his ears to anything else.

His path opened to the limit of the limit. The surroundings began to be sucked in at a completely absurd speed. Minutes began to pass as mana accumulated on Kayden's finger.

Three hundred meters around him became completely emptied of mana. There wasn't even a drop. Only the mana that was coming in to complete this deficiency, but it was a very low amount.

Kayden began to feel every muscle in his body about to explode. His finger was just bone. The condensed mana coursed through his flesh and skin in seconds and was threatening to do so to his bone. Kayden was just holding on and...

BOOOOM!

The lightning came and its attack was against him. It was the most magnificent lightning anyone there had ever seen, not counting the one from the tree. The golden color of the lightning made it shine and blind everyone. His strength was so great that the ground around Kayden began to sink dozens of meters instantly.

His attack once again broke the sound barrier and cut the lightning in two, making it appear as if there were two lightning strikes at the same time. His cut was completely monstrous and resisted for over thirty seconds against the lightning.

Unfortunately, nature's attack was very strong, and even after that time, it continued to fall without seeming to diminish in intensity. This was not a sign, as the lightning was the same strength from beginning to end.

Kayden was gathering mana around him at the best speed he could. It was little and it was an attempt to reduce the damage he would receive. He could not use one of his seeds, as the ascension test would kill him immediately for using forces that were not his.

Finally, after an endless amount of time, Kayden's attack was destroyed by the lightning and he fell onto his body at a ridiculous speed. The boy didn't even have time to scream before he began to destroy his body.

His hands in front of his body in a futile attempt were completely charred. It took three seconds for the bubble on his arms to burst. Kayden turned around without thinking twice and put his foot up.

The layer of protective mana on his leg managed to hold on for another three seconds. At every moment, Kayden was gathering mana over this tangle of pain. In just a few seconds, he was left without a leg or an arm.

In this state, he would have already died from lack of blood, but his control froze his entire body and prevented him from moving. Kayden used his remaining mana to form a bubble around his head that would protect his body.

All of this was being done practically unconsciously. He was still thinking about his actions, but he reached such a bizarre state of concentration that his thoughts were wordless and just formed into nothingness.

The lightning continued falling and pierced

Kayden's bubble. His last attempt was to place the mana into places above his belly. In a few seconds, the beam ended and Kayden only had part of his entire torso left.

Alone, he began to laugh like a lunatic as the mana around him flooded to a bizarre level. He managed. His laughter was because he gave up on the seventh ray and his body went into the process of breaking through.

The sight was completely ghastly, just a lump of flesh floating laughing alone in space. The only thing keeping him alive was mana. His body was already sending him signals to end his life and he still didn't accept it.

BOOOOM!

Black lightning fell on Kayden and those far away thought the boy was dead. Kayden didn't understand where this lightning was coming from and was about to react when he realized that if it was an attack he would already be dead.

"That..." Kayden felt his body being destroyed even more. The feeling he was experiencing was something completely insane. All the flesh from his body was removed, and he was left with only bones and the remaining organs.

He didn't understand how he was alive and before he could think about anything the flesh began to grow again. The flesh came along with new veins and joints. The process was ridiculously fast.

In a few seconds, Kayden was fully reformed with an entirely new body. He knew it wasn't the same. His mana veins were being forcefully reorganized within him. It was hurting like he had worms crawling through his body, feeling his veins moving inside his body.

After the veins organized themselves, the pain continued as his muscles and tendons were forcibly reorganized within his body. He didn't understand how this was happening. Meanwhile, he was raw, but a few seconds after his muscles organized themselves, the skin came off.

A completely new skin appeared on his body in an absurdly pure white tone, almost as if he had never seen the sun before. That color didn't last even a second as his body had all the skin torn off and thrown away. New skin grew and turned into a darker, tan-like color, perfectly capable of facing the sun without getting hurt.

Even his hair began to grow differently than normal. Its texture and shape meant that the cold air around it couldn't penetrate much of its skin. At that moment, Kayden understood. His body was being improved to the extreme for survival. It was completely bizarre.

Kayden felt his organs begin to burst in his body, it was as if small bombs were planted in him. His liver was remodeled, his lung was remodeled, his stomach was remodeled, and...

Kayden was knocked unconscious for the first time in years as his brain was destroyed and rebuilt. This experience was ridiculously traumatic and gave Kayden a headache as he regained his senses and physical capabilities.

He didn't have time to think about what happened when his nails were destroyed and remade, his sexual organs were destroyed and remade. The only thing that didn't change about his body were his bones.

"That..." Kayden felt his concepts swirling around his way within his sea of consciousness. The speed at which they were spinning was completely bizarre and within a few seconds, they disappeared into his path.

Kayden felt his connection to his path-oriented concepts disappear entirely, only the lightning concepts were still firmly in his sea. This scared Kayden for a second, but he was pulled back to reality when the process ended.

The entire improvement of his body was accomplished in a few seconds and maximized his survival in every way. Kayden felt a completely ridiculous level of strength in his body, even his additional hearts were enhanced.

"Holy shit!" Kayden felt his spiritual sense growing and growing, there seemed to be no end to it. In a few seconds, he reached a range of 3 kilometers and surpassed any normal range of a great wizard.

Kayden knew that any mage would get a spiritual sense of 500 to 1000 meters, with jinn reaching up to 1500. Those with five rays should reach a maximum of 2000, but he had an additional thousand meters.

Furthermore, his control became even greater. Kayden could practically feel the 3-kilometer mana being ready for use. This meant he could launch an attack 3 kilometers away from where he was without needing to physically be there.

Logically, its attack would be much weaker, but it was still a completely ridiculous ability. Finally, the black lightning ended, revealing Kayden floating without any clothes in the air. Even naked, the elegance and surreal strength that his aura emanated prevented any mockery.

"Come to your lord," Kayden commanded and all the mana in the region came to meet him. There were 3 kilometers of mana traveling at a completely ridiculous and meaningless speed toward the boy.

In just a few seconds all the mana of 3 miles floated around Kayden, and then he began to condense an aura cut with it, the attack took shape instantly over his fingers which this time were not consumed.

Comment ⁰

Leave the first comment for this chapter.

Vote

Send Gift

Swipe left to continue >

