

238 As important as a king

BOOOOM! 1

The attack did not make the sound of wind being cut, as it simply broke the sound barrier. The cut extended for 100 meters and advanced at a ridiculous speed towards the mountain he was on. The cut simply passed through the earth as if it were water, the sound of something being completely cut was heard by everyone around and...

BOOOM!

A completely insane chunk of land fell, and practically a quarter of the mountain fell to the ground as Kayden's attack passed through tens of meters, this degree of destruction was at a completely ridiculous level. Silence.

Nobody said anything, there were no words to describe the situation that was happening, it was practically a crazy dream come true. Slowly the seconds began to pass and finally Kayden floated in the air to return.

He entered as a mere first realm wizard unknown to many and only the last wizard of the Sun realm, a lost hope. Some people had even already paid their bets to the Enlightened Kingdom. Kayden entered like a wizard and...

"The strongest grand wizard humanity has ever seen." This sentence resounded in everyone's mind as the teenager approached like a god, even those entire kingdoms above Kayden felt pressured by this monster.

There was not even a word from the organizers as Kayden returned, this made him uneasy, he was sure the organizers were from Eden and his cut performance was meant to get him an invite, but there was nothing, and no doubt they would try to recruit him. It outdoors and in public to demonstrate strength.

"Kayden!" The king of the Enlightened Kingdom appeared in the sky. "Or rather, Count Kayden, the strongest great wizard who ever lived. I am willing to offer access to all the knowledge and treasures of my kingdom, every corner will be yours for free and easy access, I only ask that you swear not to pursue the throne. All this in exchange for your loyalty."

King Sagebrush made one of the most unimaginable scenes in the minds of all the people around, a fifth realm wizard, a true demigod, was offering a completely ridiculous offer.

"HAHAHA." A sound of laughter thundered for dozens of meters and then an elderly man in military clothing appeared floating. Kayden could openly feel his fifth realm aura being displayed to everyone who wanted to see it, this was a way of introducing himself, but it broke the rule of silence among the strong.

"What a petty proposition, Pinnacle of the Second Realm. I offer you my kingdom, why work on something that is not yours? Become my heir, everything that is mine will be yours." Kayden didn't have time to respond when another woman appeared floating in the air.

She had hair... made of water with the tip disappearing in the wind, the water seemed to come out of her hair, at the base it was dark blue and then it became more translucent, her skin was completely white and she was wearing a blue dress, Kayden I had never seen such a perfect woman before, every curve of her body was perfectly balanced.

"Kayden, I offer you the Frozen family's secret technique. Not only that, I offer you my hand in marriage and only ask that you let my adopted daughters continue to lead my kingdom." Again Kayden was unable to respond when another person appeared.

This time it was a woman with dark skin, dark would be the wrong word, her skin was completely black and several stars and planets were appearing over her body, she looked like a living hologram, even though she was strange, she had curves and a perfectly crafted face. that made her look magnificent.

"I can't offer as much as my friend Frozen, but I offer you the hands of 100 of the most beautiful women in my kingdom, our family's technique, and enough treasures to elevate you to the fourth kingdom in less than a decade." His offer seemed the simplest, but treasures to get someone into the fourth realm in ten years would cost over a century of any realm's savings.

Another person who appeared floating in the air was Azir, he didn't say anything and just looked at Kayden, the boy needed just a second to decide what to do and gave his answer, surprising everyone.

"Thank you, your majesties. I appreciate the offer from everyone present here, but I already have a companion and the Sun Kingdom is my home and to this day it has taken care of everything I needed. I will not betray your trust", said Kayden calmly while facing the most powerful people in his world.

He could have accepted Frozen's hand, but that wouldn't have been very helpful. It was just a matter of vanity and lust. Furthermore, with his newfound fame, he could ask for the Britten family to integrate with the Heart family. If they didn't accept, Kayden would just abandon his relationship with Sarah.

Regarding riches, he had many and the Sun Kingdom would give him much more now. Without a doubt, he trusted Azir, and that was the main factor in his decision. As soon as his answer was finished, the old man took out a bottle of wine from his pocket and...

"Smelly old men, make room for the rising kingdom. In a few years, I await your congratulatory gifts to the greatest kingdom on earth," he said, turning to Kayden. "Boy, this wine is exactly 5000 years old and was aged by mana. It took 500 years of work from a great wizard. Let's drink it in celebration of your advancement."

To say that the Sun Kingdom would become the largest kingdom in a few years was not lip service. A talent like Kayden would grow to unimaginable heights, and the best part was not even that, but rather what his fame could bring to the kingdom. For example, immigration advertisements to acquire geniuses and talents could easily be made under the slogan of receiving the same training as Kayden or something similar.

Kayden was taken to a closed concrete room in the stands. The flight was quick and neither of them said anything. As soon as they arrived and walked through the door, Kayden saw several people sitting in different spaces, all staring at him.

The environment was luxurious at a much higher level, with gold being used to decorate even the floor. The walls outside were painted gold, but inside they were transparent, revealing the entire world to its viewers.

"Everyone leaves", ordered Azir with mana in his voice and all the mana pressure he could muster. This caused the power room in the fourth realm to empty. "Now that it's just us, we can talk about changing resources. I will give you enough resources to grow into a fifth-realm power. Logically, I hope you understand that this takes time and I can't do it in a decade."

Kayden nodded. This was a beneficial partnership for both of them and there was no point in exhausting their greatest ally. Without a doubt, he would be Azir for many centuries, as Eden did not want to recruit him.

"I can't give you my kingdom, and I don't think you'd want to either," Kayden said, nodding. That would just be an unnecessary headache. It was much better to grow your faction to a point where it was enough to be above the kingdom and at the same time not bound by international and moral obligations.

"But the carte blanche I gave you previously will be increased by a few dozen times. Any request, even if crazy, will be granted. If you want the eradication of one of the great families, I will do it. If you want a city in your possession, I will give it to you. Any request will be granted."

Kayden understood that he practically owned the country in a way. Logically, some requests would probably be denied, but otherwise, everything was clear. The boy smiled and responded to Azir.

"Thank you, your majesty...," Kayden was interrupted by Azir.

"You can call me Azir, you've already earned that right." Azir was sincere. Kayden has done something no other human has done, and his future would certainly be far greater than anyone else had ever reached. What everyone was doing was trying to bring this future powerhouse to their side.

"Do you have any other requests, or can we toast?" Azir had the wine in his hand again, and his spirit was cut short by Kayden.

"Actually, yes. I was wondering if you could be present while I talk to Sarah and Duke Britten about uniting our two families," Kayden said. He knew that "presence" meant that he should subtly assist with his strength.

"Of course, leave it to me," said the old man, focusing on his mana sense for a moment and soon found the two people. Without any respect for their wishes, he closed the mana around them and brought them at high speed into the golden ball.
