"We will go the next day. Rest well, because tomorrow we will do a lot of miles," said Kayden as he said goodbye to his new subjects. He headed towards an unknown place and, as soon as he disappeared from everyone's sight, he returned with Milena to Gabriel's house. 1

The two sat on a spacious sofa at the entrance of the house, awaiting the arrival of the wizard from the third realm. Within minutes, they saw the muscular man appear and were surprised to see them. Immediately, he knelt and introduced himself to Kayden.

"Hello, God Kayden. How can I help you?", his tone was extremely respectful. Kayden didn't care and handed him a list.

"Here is a list of people I want you to kill. Fake a fit of madness and kill only them. If you do that, I will let you follow me tomorrow and accept you as a disciple, just like I did with Milena," Kayden said. Gabriel was surprised, but accepted.

"Of course, God. I'll do whatever you ask," he replied. The list had almost a thousand people, mainly weak relatives of the people chosen by Kayden. Some were children and elderly people, but that didn't matter to anyone in the room.

"Don't kill anyone other than those. I'll find you tomorrow at noon and tell you that you were possessed," Kayden added, ironing out a few more details before leaving with Milena and Felix. Their next stop was Julian's house.

When they arrived, they noticed that Julian was already inside, smoking some type of grass. As soon as they revealed their presence, any sign of drunkenness disappeared and he met them at the door.

"To what do I owe the honor of God's visit?", his tone was even more respectful than Gabriel's. He even knelt with his forehead on the ground.

"In a few days, I will come back for you, if you want to come with me. You will teach the new generations all your knowledge about plants and related subjects. In return, I will take you out of this abyss you call the world," said Kayden.

Julian was an herbalist and cultivator of the wood and earth elements. His knowledge of alchemy and plantations of rare ingredients was what made so many people accept his teachings.

"I accept," Julian said, without questioning details. Anyone who reached the third realm understood that they were trapped in a prison and that Kayden was their first hope in centuries.

"You must control the people and loot the city during this period. Felix will stay with you to guard everything useful. A few days later, you and him will come to me. Don't let anyone follow you. I don't want any trouble," concluded Kayden before going out with Milena.

His plan was perfectly carried out, winning the opinion of the masses. Those who accompanied him fully believed his words. When Milena and Kayden arrived at her house, the young man turned to her before she left.

"I need you to keep your end of the bargain now," Kayden said, and Milena felt apprehensive. She had had sex with many people, but she was always the stronger and more dominant side. At this moment, she was completely dominated by Kayden.

Crying and burning houses could be seen from all sides. Hundreds of people died overnight at the hands of the mad God Gabriel. He practically didn't stop for a second, attacking and killing other people. Anyone who crossed his path was easily knocked out.

Children, elderly people, women, men, young people. No one was spared. This was the greatest massacre anyone had ever witnessed.

While the population prayed for a savior, Gabriel continued to kill wantonly.

Anyone who tried to escape into the forest disappeared as soon as they stepped an inch into the darkness. It was an open-air horror circus. None of the other gods interfered. The massacre only ended in the morning.

The city was eerily silent as everyone remained inside their homes. Practically no one dared to go out and end up being killed. Amid this silence, a voice echoed throughout the area.

"My people, last night I had to resolve some matters in a very far away place. I sincerely apologize to all of you," Kayden said from the sky, where people could see him kneeling in the air. "I will avenge your loss as an apology. Gabriel! Appear" As soon as he shouted the muscular man appeared on the horizon as if he were possessed.

As soon as the third realm wizard appeared, his vision went black and he lost his sense of space. Unafraid, he remained still, as Kayden had already informed him that this would happen. His head fell from his body with the same calm expression he had seconds before.

Kayden held it in his hand with a mana current and showed it to all the people watching him. Tears of happiness appeared in the eyes of those who believed they had been abandoned.

"I know this isn't enough, but I hope it soothes the souls of the dead," Kayden said silently as people cheered him excitedly. In his mind, Kayden just stared at the pathetic beings that danced over his hand. "I know it is a painful moment, but, out of respect for the dead, we must continue in search of their new home," he concluded. "Everyone who was called yesterday appears before me. Those who cannot fly, gather together so that I can take you."

Kayden took charge of the situation in seconds and the process of bringing everyone together took about an hour, everyone was carrying suitcases with all the things they thought it was worth taking, and most of the children who were orphaned were gathered on a metal platform that Kayden was floating with his mana.

He had to gather some of these, as their guardians no longer existed and they stayed in their homes crying, Kayden asked some adults who were good at dealing with children to help them on this trip.

Kayden put mana in his voice and compelled people to get ready, it was a large amount, but disguised in dozens of layers and meters, this made it unnoticeable to any of them.

"Say goodbye to your hometown and hello to the new world," Kayden said to everyone as they flew out of the city, inside the city thousands were looking and wondering why they weren't chosen. An atmosphere of farewell and sadness permeated everywhere for a few seconds until Kayden began to fly out of the city.
