

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2391

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2391-Felicity closed her eyes and leaned into his arms, "If your parents don't agree, you can come over. My mother will definitely agree."

Vermont didn't know whether to laugh or cry. He pinched her face and whispered, "Okay, then I will rely on Mrs. Snyder's protection in the future."

"No problem."

Felicity laughed and fell asleep in a daze.

At the Imperial Garden, Keegan came out of the shower to find Stella still awake, leaning on the bed and looking at her phone.

Keegan wiped the water off his body, walked over, and sat beside the bed. He asked in a low voice, "Aren't you tired? Aren't you going to sleep?"

Stella put down her phone and pinched her brows, "I can't sleep; I'm a little excited."

"Then... listen to my prenatal education for a while?"

Stella was speechless.

"Not really."

Stella suddenly felt like she was back in high school, dominated by the fear of the college entrance exam, becoming more energetic.

Keegan lay down, "What do you think about Larry's matter?"

Stella sighed, "I don't know either. It's so confusing. How can someone with an unknown identity and origin suddenly appear? Initially, I just suspected he wasn't Larry, and now someone tells me he isn't, but no one knows who he is. I can't find a reason to call the police; his family doesn't suspect him."

Keegan didn't say anything.

Stella's words made sense. "Why call the police? You can't call and say he isn't Larry. His fingerprints are destroyed, and the police don't have his biological samples. They can only check his DNA against his relatives to determine his identity. The problem is, his family seems to love him or prefer the current Larry. If they don't cooperate, calling the police rashly will only alert the enemy."

Keegan said, "I've asked a friend to find a portrait artist. Let's see if we can restore his original appearance from Wren's description. With photos, we might get more clues."

"This is the only way," Stella was silent for a while and whispered, "I still can't believe he is so vicious. Someone who can draw and write so well must have been carefully nurtured. How could he take such a path?"

Keegan said lightly, "It's all personal choice. He dare not show his true face, so what he pursues must be more important than his life and reputation. It's not worth it." He paused and said, "Try not to contact him at the company if you can, and always bring Samuel with you."

"I know."

As he spoke, Keegan's phone rang.

Aldor sent a bunch of things. Keegan glanced at them, his expression becoming serious. His face tensed as he scrolled through the screen. The more he read, the uglier his expression became.

Stella noticed and asked in a low voice, "What's wrong? What happened?"

Keegan clenched his phone and looked up at her, his pupils trembling. After a long pause, he said, "Aldor found out why Willow went to see Kaia."

Stella was stunned, "What's the reason?"

Keegan's Adam's apple moved, and his voice was hoarse, "Kaia once examined her and collected evidence."

Stella was confused, "What kind of examination and evidence? Isn't Kaia a gynecologist? She-"

Stella's voice suddenly stopped. She looked up into Keegan's eyes and asked softly, "Was she violated?"

Keegan didn't speak and handed the phone to Stella.

Aldor had collected all the information, big or small.

Before Kaia died, Willow had gone to the hospital to register. She looked scary at the time, and several people on duty remembered her.

Her clothes were stained with blood, and her face was bruised. After registering, she asked the doctor to examine her and extract biological samples from her body.

She was calm, but her voice trembled.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2392-As soon as the words were spoken, everyone understood what had happened to this girl.

During the examination, only Kaia and Willow were present, and the colleagues on duty did not enter to avoid disturbing them.

Despite the girl's outward strength, the examination process would inevitably remind her of the humiliation she endured, and more people would only exacerbate her pain.

Kaia conducted the examination, collected biological evidence from her body, and assisted her in contacting the police.

What transpired afterward was uncertain, but Kaia's colleagues mentioned that before Kaia's death, Willow had visited her at the hospital twice. The first visit ended on a sour note, and the second time, Kaia outright refused to see her.

Some curious individuals overheard their argument that day. It seemed Willow's case wasn't filed due to insufficient evidence or some other issue. She believed there was something wrong with Kaia's examination.

But the truth remained unknown.

Kaia refused to meet with Willow or communicate with her. At that time, she was preoccupied with her daughter's surgery and perhaps weary of the situation. Willow's relentless pursuit infuriated her, leading her to call the police.

Willow was detained for seven days for causing trouble. By the time she was released, Kaia had already passed away.

This explains the scene Willow made at the funeral home.

Stella meticulously reviewed the documents repeatedly, missing nothing. After a long while, she asked, "Did she break up with Marshall after being assaulted?"

Keegan nodded; the timeline matched.

“Such a significant event, and you didn’t know about it back then?” Stella was incredulous.

Keegan remained silent.

He didn’t know, and Marshall likely didn’t either. It would be understandable if Marshall went mad after learning his beloved was assaulted in such a manner.

“Why didn’t Willow tell Marshall?”

Willow had no relatives in Rivera, and Marshall was her boyfriend at the time. When faced with such an ordeal, shouldn’t she have informed Marshall first so they could work together to bring the perpetrator to justice?

Keegan pressed his lips together. “Stella, on our wedding night, Chandler almost violated you. Why didn’t you tell me then?”

Stella was momentarily stunned, then replied, “My situation was different from Willow’s. First, Chandler didn’t actually harm me. Second, our marriage wasn’t based on love. I wasn’t sure if you’d believe me. Third, your mother said such an incident would disgrace the Kane family. Because of all this, I chose to keep silent.”

She paused and added, “In fact, I’ve regretted it for many years. What’s the point of saving face? I wasn’t the one at fault. Why should I be ashamed? If you didn’t believe me, it would mean you weren’t worthy of me. Why should I be upset about that? I was just too young and scared at the time, lacking the perspective and courage I have now.”

Keegan hugged her, saying, “I don’t know why Willow didn’t tell Marshall, but before Willow’s mysterious disappearance, there were already problems in their relationship. I witnessed them arguing. Marshall usually has a good temper, but that argument was more about his stubbornness than an actual quarrel.”

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2393-Marshall’s love affair eventually came to the attention of the Moore family. They didn’t accept a woman without a background as their daughter-in-law but had their own subtle ways of expressing it. They didn’t openly object but sent an invitation letter, sincerely inviting Willow to attend the old man Moore’s birthday party.

They sent clothes and jewelry, appearing to value Willow greatly. Even Marshall was surprised. They were too young to realize that this was a trap. They believed the elders of the Moore family genuinely accepted their relationship.

Willow wore the clothes and jewelry provided by the Moore family and attended the banquet with Marshall.

However, the lavish banquet wasn't something one could blend into just by wearing expensive clothes. It was a spiritual humiliation, without overt conflict, but with subtle crushing and contempt from all aspects of origin, vision, and knowledge.

Willow, proud of her achievements, had worked her way up from a small town to the bustling metropolis of Rivera. She always believed in her potential for limitless future success.

But she could never have imagined that her hard-won achievements were insignificant to these people. She was even a joke and a topic of gossip.

She could accept material differences because she was young and willing to work hard, with a promising future ahead. But the spiritual and worldview differences were something she couldn't reconcile.

After the banquet, Willow calmly reevaluated her relationship with Marshall.

She was actually more rational than Marshall. If she saw it wasn't suitable, she would end the relationship in time. No matter how much she loved him, she wouldn't lose her self-respect.

But Marshall couldn't do that. He had been obedient to his family for years, never experiencing a rebellious phase. When he finally fell in love, he was stubborn and persistent, unwilling to let go.

At that time, Keegan already felt the two weren't compatible.

Willow wasn't a girl who indulged in love. Compared to Marshall, she had a clear plan for her future. Marshall didn't have the ability to defy his family then, but he still tried to keep her by his side, which was bound to fail.

Keegan predicted they would eventually break up but didn't expect Willow to disappear first. Then, someone with a clear plan for the future abandoned her imminent degree.

He had never understood why, but learning about this now clarified some doubts.

Willow was assaulted but didn't tell Marshall. Her reasons were unknown to outsiders, but she must have had her reasons.

She was polite to everyone but smashed her portrait at Kaia's funeral. Perhaps her spiritual world was on the brink of collapse at that time. When someone is easily broken, no matter what they do, it's beyond reproach.

Stella felt deeply uncomfortable. She hadn't expected such a tragic story.

"Back then, Willow collected evidence and immediately called the police. Why wasn't a case filed? Why was it suppressed so effectively? You didn't know about this?"

Stella couldn't believe no one was involved.

Keegan couldn't believe it either. He pondered and finally thought of the Moore family.

If it was the Moore family, they likely didn't want the matter to escalate. Were they afraid of damaging the family's reputation, or were they somehow involved in the matter?

Keegan dared not think too much. He never expected Willow's situation to involve so many people.

He took a deep breath, calmed his mind, and whispered, "Don't think about it. Go to sleep. Someone wants to uncover the truth even more than we do."

Stella responded, and after a while, she asked again, "Did you get Larry's blood sample?"

Keegan nodded.

Stella said, "Keep it safe. It might be useful someday."

After Larry returned to the company post-sick leave, he became Jaylene's driver. When Stella heard about this, she was taken aback.

Kiara remarked, "I used to feel sorry for Larry, but he really abandoned his principles when he saw the benefits!"

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2394-Stella collected herself and said calmly, "People always strive for higher positions. There's nothing surprising about that."

Handing the signed document to Kiara, she added, "Good luck in the preliminary competition tomorrow."

Kiara smiled, "Thank you, Boss Jewell, for your kind wishes."

After Kiara left, Stella sat at her desk, marking and highlighting Larry and Jaylene's names with a pen, finally drawing an arrow and a question mark next to them.

Not long after, there was a knock on her office door. Samuel called, "Boss Jewell, Mrs. Saun has requested us to gather in the Perfumery Department. She has something to announce."

Stella snapped back to reality and responded, "I know, I'll be there right away."

She crossed out the page with her notes, tore it off, and fed it into the shredder. Then she put on her coat and headed out.

When she arrived, the Perfumery Department was already bustling with people. Besides the department's employees, many supervisors from other departments and senior executives had gathered. Everyone stood in the hall, waiting.

This seemed quite significant, and Stella felt a bit puzzled.

Colleagues were already discussing the matter nearby, with Sonia among them. Stella felt reassured.

Ever since Sonia had successfully identified the S-number essential oil, a formula even Darcie didn't know, just by its scent, her colleagues in the perfume department had begun to view her differently.

Initially, everyone excluded her. Aside from following Darcie and her daughter's instructions, they believed she was an incompetent person who had gotten the job through connections, just like Jaylene.

Jaylene acted superior every day, arriving before nine in the morning and leaving after eight in the evening. However, she couldn't perform any actual work, leaving her tasks to others.

She took the money while others did the work, and the credit still went to her. Such nepotism is despised in any workplace.

If they couldn't exclude Jaylene, they could at least exclude Sonia.

But after the S perfume incident, everyone realized that Sonia was different from Jaylene. Sonia genuinely had talent.

Although a bit reserved, Sonia never procrastinated when given a task. Even when colleagues tried to make things difficult for her by dumping their work on her, she never complained. After finishing the tasks, she would proactively explain to the others how to do it, genuinely believing they needed help.

Initially, everyone thought she was being sarcastic, but they later realized she was sincere. She even chose times when she wasn't busy to teach others.

She generously shared the fragrance recipes she had tried with everyone.

Gradually, they saw Sonia as a bit naive but also incredibly diligent. Her work ethic influenced the entire team.

Mr. Kane Got Blacklisted Chapter 2395-Previously, during peak season, the end of the month was the busiest time, as everyone procrastinated early in the month, only to scramble to complete tasks later. But with Sonia's enthusiasm, efficiency, and willingness to help, the group's overall efficiency improved. This month, not only did no one work overtime, but their performance also surpassed other groups, leading to higher salaries for everyone.

To her colleagues, Sonia had become a driving force, helping everyone meet their KPI standards.

"What's the discussion about?" Stella asked Sonia quietly.

Sonia shook her head and pointed to the chatting colleagues nearby, whispering, "I'm just listening."

So Stella stood by, listening to the gossip.

"What does Mrs. Saun want to announce? Why are so many leaders here?"

"According to the grapevine, Mrs. Saun has just hired a top-tier perfumer. Her competition qualifications are registered under the company's name, and she's aiming for this year's championship. With all this fanfare, it seems the perfumer is about to join us."

Stella asked, "Who is this perfumer? Why is there such a grand welcome for her?"

Sonia replied, "Have you heard of Siren?"

"Siren! The once wildly popular perfume was designed and formulated by the perfumer coming today."

"Siren? The first time I smelled it, I was amazed. Although the series has been overused, its initial impact was remarkable. It's enough to boast about."

"Wow, the company hired her? She won the national championship two years in a row."

"Didn't she join a major company overseas? Why would she return? Our company's offer can't compare to what she had there."

"Maybe she couldn't adapt to living abroad? My friend returned to Rivera because she couldn't stand the food in the UK. With her resume, she won't have salary issues anywhere."

"You've been talking for so long, what's her name?"

Stella was also curious about the identity of the perfumer Darcie recruited.

A colleague whispered, "Her name is Mallory. The name Siren probably comes from her own name."

As the colleague spoke, the hall doors opened. Darcie walked in with Jaylene and her entourage. Following Darcie was a tall woman in a white shirt and black skirt, dressed simply. Before Stella could see her face, she noticed a high-grade icy purple jade bracelet on the woman's wrist.

Stella found the bracelet familiar, and when the woman turned around, she was startled.

Simultaneously, the colleague continued, "Her name is Mallory, and the name Siren likely derives from her name."

Darcie's new hire was her?

Stella absorbed the shock. She hadn't heard anything from her brother. Did Mallory not tell her brother she was joining Caline?

She wondered if Darcie knew about Mallory and Trevor's relationship. Was hiring Mallory a coincidence or intentional?

Darcie raised her hand and spoke gently, "Everyone, please be quiet. I called you here to introduce a new colleague. This is Mallory Craig. Many of you have likely heard of her. She's a two-time national perfume competition champion and the chief perfumer of a large international company, with numerous accolades. She just returned from abroad and will temporarily serve as the deputy manager of the perfume department, assisting the managers and handling matters related to the perfume competition. Please give her a warm welcome."
