

Chapter 7 Third Wheeler (2)

Layla never thought that she would see Nora Alexander in the bedroom she shared with William Jones.

They grew up together and Layla will still be amazed by her beauty every time she sees her.

Nora looked at Layla and greeted her, "Hey, Layla."

"Why are you here....." Layla had a good temper but she couldn't stop the anger raging inside her when she saw Nora in her bedroom.

Nora is in her room, wearing her clothes, and even smoking in her room.

She made it look like this was her room, her house.

"I slept here last night." Nora answered.

"How can you do this to me? This is me and William's bedroom, you can't just sleep in here!" Layla said angrily.

She just divorced William and Nora was quick to move in. Layla couldn't believe this.

Nora Alexander stood up and looked right into Layla's eyes, "William wasn't feeling well last night, so I came here to take care of him."

She knew that Layla was angry.

"You could have called a doctor! So, stop making excuses!" Layla said.

Layla doesn't mind what they do outside but she couldn't bear it they do it in front of her.

Nora knitted her eyebrows together and said, "Now you mention about it. Why wouldn't William call you if he is not feeling well. You are his wife and also a doctor. Why would he call me?"

What Nora just said made Layla speechless because she knew Nora was right. William never told her anything.

But he tells Nora everything.

That's the difference between Layla and Nora.

Layla never felt so embarrassed before because of what Nora said. One of the things she hates the most is to be embarrassed in front of Nora.

That was because people will always compare her with Nora, and Nora will always be the winner because she is beautiful and talented.

Nora looked at Layla who was so angry so she shrugged and said, "I didn't mean to say that to upset you, I was just joking. I stayed here for the night. Nothing happens between me and William."

Layla didn't understand why Nora started to explain herself out of blue. Didn't she just provoke her?

This wasn't the Nora she knew.

"You must be thinking why he didn't touch me. Because I am pregnant. He was afraid that he would hurt the baby."

With that, Nora placed her hand on her belly.

Now Layla knew why she explained to her suddenly. Nora was pregnant is all Layla heard.

She stepped back a few steps. She thought that Nora just came back and William wanted to be with her after she came back. Now she knows that William has been fooling her.

Nora walked towards Layla and said, "You and William have been married for three years but you don't have a child. I didn't expect that I would be pregnant in such a short time."

Layla was very angry that she shouted, "You are shameless! Even William loves you, you are still a third wheeler!"

She never regrets so much for saying yes to divorce. Why would she agree to divorce? Why would she give the woman in front of her a chance to get William?

If she didn't agree to divorce, Nora will always be the third wheeler.

"Come one. Who is the third wheeler here? You know better than me. The person who William loves is always me! If I didn't leave three years ago, you wouldn't be able to marry him. And now that I am back, you should return William to me."

"You betrayed him! You didn't think of him when you left him with another man! Do you know how sad he was?"

"I did something bad to William and I am sorry for doing so. He already forgave me so it's not your business to talk about this! It was because of me you are able to marry William. You should be thankful.”

“Thankful?” So, what she meant was that Layla should be thankful when she found Nora in her room?

“I know that William is talented and hard to let go. But you shouldn't be greedy, that will only make you uglier.” Nora said.

Layla felt the urge to cry but she knew that crying in front of Nora will only made her feel like she is winning.

“Yes, I am greedy and ungrateful. But I will never betray William! I don't understand why William loves you still after what you did to him.” Layla said.

Nora laughed and said, “I don't understand how dare you are to love William too.”

Comments

Gift