Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1421 –Dominic was slack- jawed as well.He saw the child looking over at him and quickly gave him a thumbs-up.

“You’re amazing!”

The boy grinned and puffed out his chest after Dominic praised him.

Lily cocked her head and studied the lock.She was not good at this and could not understand the mechanism behind it.She had seen it on TV before, and there was an online urban legend that someone could open all the neighborhood doors with a single strand of instant noodle.

However, seeing her young son open the showcase lock with a thin cable from some toy was rather shocking.

“Who taught you that? She looked toward Galen, wanting to know where he had learned such a thing.

“Dee-Dee!” Galen answered thoughtfully.

“Who’s Dee-Dee?”

The older man looked puzzled.

“Daisy?” Lily asked after some thought, “Aunt Daisy?”

“yes!”

Galen said, nodding sharply, “I learned it myself!”

His contradictory remarks puzzled Dominic.

“So you learned it yourself, or did Aunt Dee- Dee teach you?”

“Hmm...”

Galen knitted his brow and did not know how to organize the right words to explain something somewhat complex to him.

However, Lily was his mother, so she understood what he meant.

“Did you learn it when Aunt Dee- Dee was doing it?”

The boy nodded in excitement.

“You learned it just by looking. That’s something else!” Dominic said, impressed.

“Lily, your son will go far in the future”

However, Lily was not thinking about that.

“Where did you see Aunt Dee-Dee do it?”

Galen shook his head to show that he had no idea. He could not describe where it was, probably because he was too young.

Nonetheless, it was easy for Lily to guess.

Galen could still name the place if it were somewhere he was familiar with, like the playroom or bedroom.

Since he could not, it had to be a place he seldom went.

“It looks like the nanny we hired is not what she seems.”

Initially puzzled by what Galen was talking about, Dominic understood it after hearing Lily’s question and called her, “Lily?”

“I’m fine.”

Lily caught herself.

“After I settle what I’ve been busy with, I might go overseas. During that time…”

She wanted to say something but stopped herself.

“Forget it. We’ll talk about it when it’s time.”

“Why are you going overseas?”

Dominic caught on to the main point.

“You’re not going to Burnwken, are you? The pandemic is raging over there, and we don’t know much. Why do you want to go there? If you’re truly worried, then ask Alexander to come back!”

Lily thought for a moment and said slowly, “I think there’s more than meets the eye about the pandemic.”

Dominic wanted to say more at first, but he was stumped by what she said.

“Did you discover something???”

“No, but the mass poisoning at the factory and the pandemic suddenly starting after Alexander went over seems too coincidental to me. Also...”

She wanted to mention the experiment at the research institute.

‘What is the purpose of the drugs or toxins that one could unknowingly inhale? Is it purely for curing illnesses? I’m afraid things are not so simple!!!’

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1422 –However, Dominic had not interfered with matters of the outside world for a long time, and Lily did not want to involve him.

Living as a carefree recluse was nice, and he should be enjoying his life in old age.

Therefore, Lily did not say anything in the end and left with Galen in a hurry, bringing the herbs she had collected.

Reaching home, she saw everything was as usual, but her mind was not at rest.

She had always thought their house was safe, as she and Alexander had carefully installed various surveillance and safety devices all over the place, and her housekeepers underwent a rigorous selection process.

Still, even a palace could not ensure it was 100% safe, let alone an ordinary home like hers.

“Galen, you’re back!”

Daisy, the nanny, came to welcome them warmly. She wore ordinary loungewear and looked pleasant, with her hair pulled into a bun.

Barely over 30, she was relatively young, and her skin was so well taken care of that she looked like someone in her 20s.

Even though the couple checked her background and didn’t find anything suspicious, Galen’s mistake today made Lily feel uneasy.

“Dee-Dee!”

Not knowing what was bothering his mother, the boy hurried over, spreading his arms.

On the way home, Lily wanted to tell her son not to mention what happened today to Daisy, but a child his age would keep asking why, and he would let it slip eventually.

She may as well not mention anything and treat what happened as nothing unusual.

Daisy held Galen up and let out a happy smile.

“Are you tired after going out with your mommy today? Do you want to take a nice bath and drink some milk before you take a nap?”

“Yes!” Galen answered readily.

Daisy smiled at Lily and said, “Ma’am, I’ll take Galen back to his room to rest then. Oh, yeah, has he eaten anything yet? Should I prepare some food for him?”

“No, he’s full and shouldn’t overeat,” Lily said blandly, and she did not detect anything unusual about Daisy’s expression.

“Okay!”

Daisy went upstairs, holding the child.

Staring after her, Lily saw her steps were light and quick, and one could tell that Daisy was a neat and efficient person.

Lily chose her because of that and because Galen liked her very much.

‘However...’

Rubbing her brows, she called the butler and asked him to bring her the CCTV footage for the past two months.

She mentioned nothing except that she wanted to see how Galen was doing when he was not home.

The butler then went to get it.

She did not ask anything because she worried she would raise Daisy’s suspicion.

Knowing how to open a lock like this, she was not someone with a simple background, but having taken care of Galen for so long, she would not harm him now if she truly harbored bad intentions.

Besides, other than what Galen had shown them, Daisy did nothing overly strange.

However, knowing that there was something wrong with her, Lily was still worried and decided to go through the surveillance video before deciding whether to keep her as a nanny.

The more she wanted to go to Burnwken and check on Alexander, the more issues she had to resolve, and the more stressed she became.

If Alexander was still here, she could talk to him, and he would calm her down easily,.. Lily hardly slept that night.

Going through the footage from nearly three months, she did not find anything off about Daisy...

She spent her days at the designated areas feeding the boy, playing with him, telling him stories, and even letting him ride a horse with her hands and knees on the floor.

One could say that the woman was very patient and dedicated to her job.

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1423—Lily did not find out when Galen had learned to pick a lock from the woman, but she knew her son was not lying. He was too young to even think about doing so and did not need to.

‘Daisy, oh, Daisy, just what are you up to?’ Rhea Moore returned home from the laboratory at 5 a.m. She opened the door and went upstairs, seeing no one except the maids in the quiet house.

Just as she got to the second floor, Maria, who had woken up in hunger and left her room to eat something, was surprised to see her.

“Ree?”

Puzzled, Rhea turned around with a slight frown.

Rubbing her eyes, Maria saw it was Rhea and grew excited.

“Ree, you’re home! Why didn’t you tell me about it? You’re back so early —no, you’re back so late!”

Maria could tell she had just returned home by what she was wearing.

Feeling sorry for her, she placed one hand on her arm and tried to touch her face with the other.

“Poor thing. Look at your dark circles.”

Cocking her head to dodge her hand in irritation, Rhea said, “I’m going to bed.”

She was asking her mother not to disturb her.

‘Since I have dark circles, then let me get some sleep!’ Maria nodded repeatedly.

“Go sleep. Have a nice long sleep, okay? I’ll tell the others not to disturb you.”

“Okay.”

With a slight nod, Rhea opened the door to her room and entered.

Looking at the closed door, Maria sighed in relief and could hardly hide her joy, no longer feeling sleepy.

Since her beloved daughter was back, she decided not to go out today and stay home to keep her company.

When Rhea was young, Maria gave her full attention to Anastasia.

Fabian’s business was not doing as well as it is now, and to bring themselves into favor with Cameron, who holds a high position in the government, the first thing was to butter up his daughter.

However, when Rhea grew older, Maria slowly realized that her daughter was not close to her.

Every time she wanted to touch or hug her, Rhea would quietly move away, as if she did not enjoy it or was not used to intimacy.

Now that she tried to bond with her daughter, she hardly had any chance, as Rhea was always busy working.

The busier she got, the colder she became.

Maria worried that if Rhea led her life like this, she would never be able to marry well.

“Look at Lily Russell. She’s a nobody and not as capable as my darling daughter, but she ended up marrying Alexander. If he’s not married, Alexander, with his impeccable background, looks, and capabilities, would be a perfect candidate to be my son-in-law.

Still, what a pity!!!” Her stomach growled as she thought about it, and she went downstairs to eat.

Rhea entered her room and walked to her desk to take off her coat. She unzipped a pocket inside and carefully removed a wooden case from an inner layer.

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1424—Rhea placed the wooden case on the desk, thought for a moment, then brought the pen holder to the front.

Turning around, she took two steps away, then returned to put the wooden case inside the pen holder. She took out several pens and pencils, fit them nicely inside, and let out a slight sigh of relief. She took her clothes and a towel, then went to take a hot bath in the bathroom, as she had not been home for many days.

Although there were bathrooms and restrooms at the research institute, she could not take a nice bath there as they were not well-equipped.

Lying in the bathtub, she felt her overworked mind and body start to relax, and she grew sleepy.

After some time, Rhea jerked awake and was shocked to realize she had fallen asleep in the bathtub and there were footsteps outside.

Her brain grew sharp immediately, and she quickly rose from the bathtub.

Putting on a bathrobe, she neared the door and heard the footsteps stop outside, not far away.

She suddenly pulled the door. The bathroom door creaked loudly as it opened.

“Jeez!”

Clapping her hand to her chest, Maria was startled, and her face paled.

Having entered quietly, she saw the light in the quiet bathroom was on and did not call for Rhea as she guessed her daughter could be taking a bath.

She did not expect the door to suddenly swing open and startle her.

“What are you doing?!”

Frowning, Rhea looked impatient.

"I-I thought you hadn't eaten anything, so I got someone to make you breakfast. I'm bringing it to you," she said, somewhat embarrassed, as she pointed at the breakfast on the desk.

All other stuff on the desk had been pushed aside to make room for her breakfast.

Rhea's pupils constricted. She strode over, picked up the pen holder, and grew relaxed seeing the wooden case still inside. She glanced at the pancakes and frowned.

"Do not enter my room without my permission next time!"

"Ree, I was just bringing you breakfast. Besides, I'm your mother. Why can't I enter your room?" Maria said indignantly.

"Fine, enter the room as you please then, and I'll just stay outside. This is your house anyway!"

She got up and went to take her clothes from the closet, acting as though she was about to leave.

Maria panicked and clutched her robe.

"Ree, I didn't mean that. Fine, I won't enter your room without your permission, alright?"

Rhea stopped taking out her clothes when she heard this.

Maria was helpless.

"Ree, I know you went abroad to study for too long and aren't close to me, but you're my child, after all. There shouldn't be a grudge between a mother and her daughter, and you can't always treat me like an enemy. I only have one daughter..."

"Are you sure?" Rhea interrupted her and let out a cold chuckle.

"Don't you have two daughters???"

When she was young, Maria used to say this to Anastasia in her presence: "Although I didn't give birth to you, I treat you as my daughter, and you're dearer to me than my own! Now that your mom isn't around, I'll always be your mother!"

Rhea had heard things like this so many times that she was numb.

"Fine. If she enjoys becoming Anastasia's mother, then go ahead! If she doesn't appreciate me as her daughter, I wouldn't appreciate her as my mother either."

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1425—"Ree, what are you talking about? I told you I was just trying to please Tasia and why. If it weren't for your uncle, our family—"

"If it weren't for Cameron Rollins, we would still be living in poverty and hunger?" Rhea said impatiently and picked her ear.

"I don't want to listen to these things. I've heard them enough. If you want to curry his favor and live off him, that's your business. I, Rhea Moore, don't need him!"

"Ree, you shouldn't say that."

Maria wanted to say something else, but seeing Rhea's impatient expression, she gave up.

"Okay, I'll stop talking! Still, you've grown up and should understand why I did it, shouldn't you? Stop acting like a child."

She spoke soothingly, trying hard to patch things up with her daughter.

Rhea pulled a long face and did not reply. She sat at the desk and touched the pen holder gently and thoughtfully.

Maria felt gloomy and helpless looking at Rhea. She did not know how to communicate or bond with her daughter.

"Ree, you've been so busy and mustn't have had anything to eat. Please eat. I'll get the maids to redo your breakfast if you don't like it. After you eat some food, you'll feel better if you go to sleep," she persuaded.

Rhea stared at the pen holder and asked blandly, "Is there anything else?"

In other words, she wanted her mother to leave her alone and not waste her time.

Maria pursed her lips and felt somewhat embarrassed.

"No, nothing. I'll leave you alone then."

She got up, paused, and looked hopefully at Rhea as if waiting for her daughter to ask her to stay.

However, Rhea did not even look at her mother and focused only on the pen holder in her hand.

Saddened, Maria lowered her gaze in disappointment and turned to leave.

Just as she stepped out the door, she heard a voice coming from behind her, "Wait!"

"I'm still here!"

Maria happily turned around and threw Rhea an expectant look 'I know Ree still loves me, doesn't she?' However, Rhea merely lifted her gaze without a trace of feelings and peered quietly at her mother.

"How's Anastasia's illness?"

Maria was disappointed for a moment and caught herself before jabbering, "She's in better spirits than before. She used to sleep a lot and now she always goes out. I haven't visited them much lately, and she doesn't let me go there often either."

"The miracle doctor's prescription seems to work, doesn't it? They don't call him a miracle doctor for nothing!"

Maria felt she had found the right person, as Austin was indeed something else.

"Those lousy doctors failed to determine that Tasia had gotten poisoned. They even wasted so much of our time over the years. I should've sought Austin's help earlier. Anyway, I'm not too late. Ron is now indebted to us, and he'll undoubtedly award us with the project.

'It's good that the problem has dragged on for so long. The fact that it has taken so long to cure Tasia makes my effort even more meaningful, and Cameron will forever be indebted to us!' With those thoughts in mind, Maria felt so pleased with herself that she smiled.

"That miracle doctor? What can he accomplish???" Rhea snorted dismissively.

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1426—Maria noticed her daughter's disdainful tone and hurriedly said, "Ree, you have no idea because you weren't there. The miracle doctor is amazing. Out of so many doctors, only he knew that Tasia had gotten poisoned and her obesity had an uncommon cause. Besides, after taking his prescription, I can see that she's getting better."

"Oh, yeah? How is she better?"

Rhea smirked, but no one could tell if she was smiling.

Maria thought her daughter's reaction was weird but did not think much about it.

As Rhea rarely showed concern for Anastasia and was willing to talk more, Maria started to babble on the topic, "She looks slimmer, but a fatty can quickly lose weight anyway, and there's no telling how much she would eventually lose.

"However, Tasia has been in good spirits. She used to look sick whenever I talked to her, but not anymore. Anyway, I now feel strange going to your uncle's house. Every time I step through the gate, I feel like I've entered the wrong house.

"I haven't gotten used to it yet."

She felt it was funny and almost thought the place had gotten robbed when she noticed how empty it was.

Rhea grew curious when she saw her mother's smile.

"Why aren't you used to it? What changed?"

"Well, the house is the same, but the plants you told me to send over are gone," Maria said casually.

"Gone?!"

Rhea bolted to her feet and startled Maria.

Maria did not expect such a massive reaction.

She thought Rhea cared about the plants and hurriedly said, "Calm down! They didn't get stolen but got lent to someone else temporarily. They'll return eventually."

"Lent to someone else? To whom?" Rhea was still standing.

She looked agitated and not void of emotion like her usual self.

"You...calm down, okay?"

Maria hesitated as she tried to soothe her daughter.

"I'm not sure, but I recall Tasia saying she lent them to Lily Russell.

You know Lily deals with raw materials and probably found the plants useful?

"Tasia is such an innocent child and listens to whatever that woman says. I've already told her not to hang out with Lily too often, but Tasia never listens..."

Maria paused momentarily and assessed her daughter's expression. She knew Rhea was angry.

"Are the plants important? Should I tell Tasia to get them back?"

"There's no need!"

Rhea sat down with a stiff face.

Although she said so, one could easily tell she was still mad.

Maria knew her daughter did not mean it and said, "If they're useful, we must take them back.

Since Lily has only borrowed them, there's no reason we can't get her to return the plants!

"If you need the plants, why did you give them to Tasia in the first place? You should have kept them, shouldn't you? I know you truly care about Tasia, although you act like you don't, and that is why you've given her the good stuff, haven't you? "Oh, Ree, you're so kind-hearted."

Maria felt moved and thought her daughter was an angel.

"Rest assured, I'll go there later and get them back to our house!"

She wanted to say more, but Rhea rudely interjected.

"I said there's no need! Can't you understand???"

Maria was astonished when her daughter shouted at her. She gaped at Rhea wordlessly.

Rhea noticed her mother's horrified expression and sighed.

Then she knitted her brow slightly while softening her tone.

"I mean, there's no need. Since I gave the plants to Anastasia, it doesn't concern me whom she gives them to."

"Oh..."

Maria snapped out of her trance and answered dully. Yet, from how she looked, she still had not recovered from her shock..

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1427—Rhea knew what her mother was like and repeated to emphasize her point, “I genuinely don’t want them anymore, so don’t bring them back, okay? If you do, I’ll throw them away, believe it or not!”

“Okay! Okay!”

Maria nodded repeatedly and believed that her headstrong daughter would do such a thing.

‘If you don’t want them, then so be it. There’s no need to get so riled up, is there?’ Rhea took out a hand cream, squeezed some onto the back of her hands, rubbed them together, and slowly spread the cream while asking, “So you’re saying Lily Russell has taken all plants away?”

“I guess so. I can only say that it’s hard to see even a strand of grass at your uncle’s house since Tasia has moved all the plants away. Now I think the house looks empty and cold without them.”

Maria hugged herself and made a show of shuddering to indicate that she was not used to the change.

“Has Lily studied medicine before?” Rhea asked thoughtfully.

When she noticed Maria’s puzzled look, she added, “Didn’t you say she helped Anastasia adjust her diet?”

“Ha!” Maria waved dismissively.

“She’s only just winging it.

What does Lily know about medicine? She’s only saying some ambiguous stuff to hoodwink your cousin! Only Tasia is foolish enough to believe her.”

“Oh, yeah?” Rhea said blandly, not quite believing her mother.

She knew her mother well, after all.

‘She often judges a matter subjectively, like how she regards Austin Fike and Lily Russell. Before this, she had hired many mainstream and alternative medicine physicians, including new-age healers, claiming they were miracle doctors. Yet, she has no idea that her very own daughter is the real medical expert.’

Therefore, Rhea would only believe her mother's helpful information, nothing else.

"yeah!"

Maria wanted to say something else, but seeing Rhea cock her head while coldly and meticulously applying the hand cream, she could tell her daughter cared more about it than her.

Maria suddenly did not know what to say to Rhea.

There were too few topics they could talk about, and very often, she was the one who would keep yapping while Rhea occasionally gave bland responses.

Rhea's reaction today was considered rare.

"Ree, I better get going,"

Maria hesitated and said tentatively.

"Okay,"

"Okay," Rhea responded nonchalantly without even lifting her eyelids.

Although Maria wanted to stay longer, she knew bean she could not get her daughter to talk much and would risk upsetting her, causing Rhea to leave the house. She walked to the doorway and paused as she closed the door.

Maria saw her daughter rubbing the cream unto her fingertips with her head cocked.

Half of Rhea's body glowed attractively and warmly under the light, while the other half was covered in shadow and looked so cold that Maria shuddered despite herself.

'Is there no way to close the emotional gap between Ree and me?'

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1428—Looking on as Anastasia gulped down the herbal soup, Lily handed her a napkin and took the empty bowl from her.

"Can you handle the taste?"

Wiping the corners of her mouth, Anastasia nodded.

"It's not bad!"

“Not bad?” Lily frowned.

‘Even the smell was so pungent. How could she still think it’s not bad?’ Seeing her doubtful look, Anastasia chuckled, then picked up a glass near her to take a sip of water and said, “I’ve had God knows how many weird medicines that taste worse than this. The bitter ones were still acceptable, but some were truly disgusting. I...”

Pausing, she waved to indicate that she better stop or she would throw up.

“you ate them to lose weight?”

She could guess so, and Anastasia nodded.

“What else? Anyway, I suffered a lot before this, and looking back, I wonder why I should waste my effort. I might as well eat normally and perhaps become a 650-pound fatty and stay that way. Who knows? At least I didn’t have to go through all that.” She sighed.

Although it happened long ago, she would feel sad whenever it was mentioned.

She had stomached all those sufferings, physical torments, and shame brought on by people’s stares over the years, but they would only grow milder and not go away.

Lily felt sorry for her.

“You’ll get well. I’m sure you will!”

“Yes! I believe it too.”

After meeting Lily, she felt like God had opened a window for her and grew cheerful.

Not only did she feel better, but she was also not as depressed as before.

Anastasia felt like she was reborn and no longer herself.

Rather, she felt as if she had a whole new self.

“Oh, yes, Lily, what was it?”

Although she drank it, she had yet to ask what it was.

Lily chuckled despite herself.

“You finished it without asking what it was. What if it was poison?”

“No way! You wouldn’t poison me.”

Shaking her head, Anastasia said confidently, "If you want to harm me, you could just refrain from telling me that my obesity is caused by poisoning and simply watch me die. Why go through all the trouble?"

She sounded casual, but Lily felt terrible for her.

"Don't talk like that!"

"I'm telling the truth! Anyway, what exactly was it? Was it meant for weight loss or detoxification?"

After giving it some thought, she laughed and enquired.

"No," Lily said, shaking her head.

"It's a prescription to strengthen you and might do your body good. Just give it a try, okay?"

"Okay!"

Since she decided to let go, Anastasia has relaxed, knowing she could not get worse than she was.

Moreover, she was visibly getting better. She saw her reflection in the mirror, and she looked more spirited. She hated looking in mirrors because she felt fat and ugly.

However, she had started to accept herself and even enjoyed seeing the changes she had undergone daily.

"Tasia..."

Galen carefully climbed down the staircase on his tiptoes, one step at a time.

"Hey, sweetie pie, be careful, okay?"

Anastasia happily answered, then rose and walked over, her gait much lighter and quicker. She was even able to hug Galen and carry him off the staircase.

"You've woken up, huh?"

"I woke up a long time ago!"

He pouted indignantly.

"Then why didn't you come down and play?"

Anastasia looked at him smilingly.

The cute little boy got his good looks from his parents. He looked like Alexander, but Galen's features were softer, and his skin was lighter.

"Tasia..."

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1429—"Dee-Dee won't let..."

Turning around, he pointed upstairs.

"Mom and Tasia want to talk." He could say simple, incoherent sentences.

Lily was initially concerned, wondering if he had trouble expressing himself, but she later learned through research that Galen was considered a precocious communicator.

A child his age was unable to put sentences together coherently.

Galen was doing quite well, and he was able to express his thoughts logically.

Hearing what he said, Lily and Anastasia almost looked upstairs at the same time and saw Daisy hurry over to the stairwell and smile in embarrassment.

"Ma'am, I worried that he would disturb you, so I didn't let him go downstairs, but he ran out when I went to get some clothes for him."

"It's okay. I'll keep Galen company. Go do your things," Lily said blandly.

Daisy said, "Okay," and went back upstairs. Carrying Galen over, Anastasia sat on the sofa and asked, despite herself, "Lily, the nanny is so young!"

"She's slightly over 30, I think. She is quite young indeed."

Lily nodded.

"She doesn't look like 30, more like 20 something. She's also quite pretty. Don't you feel worried about hiring such a nanny? What if ..."

She paused, probably thinking it was inappropriate to say what was on her mind.

"what if Alexander ends up having an affair with her?" Lily smiled nonchalantly.

Anastasia pursed her lips into a smile.

“N-No, no way! No matter how young and pretty she is, she’s not as beautiful as you are. Besides, you’re so capable. If I were a man, I would choose you too!”

“Me too!” the boy hurriedly said.

The two women laughed.

Lily said, “Being someone of his stature, Alex could have an affair anytime he liked, and no one could stop him. However, I don’t worry about such a possibility.”

She shrugged and said, “Perhaps he worries more about me having an affair.”

“Nonsense. You’re not that kind of person.”

Anastasia retorted immediately.

“What’s ‘having an affair’?” The little boy asked curiously.

The two realized what they said was too complicated for a child to understand, yet children at this stage loved listening to adults when they talked.

“Uh..Uh..”

Anastasia did not know how to reply.

Lily thought about it and said, “It’s being dishonest to someone else and doing what you shouldn’t. It’s something bad.”

He put his eyebrows together and thought about it for a while, then gave a strong nod as if he understood.

“Then I won’t have an affair!”

Anastasia burst out laughing.

Lily joined her.

‘He truly has no idea what he’s talking about!’ The boy blinked, not sure why they were laughing.

‘Did I say something wrong? I shouldn’t do a bad and dishonest thing, right???’

Spoiled by mr. russell chapter 1430—Anastasia stayed until nightfall as Lily wanted to see how her body responded to the medicine.

The young woman had gone to the toilet five times in the afternoon. She did not feel much pain in her stomach, which kept growling and making her fart.

Embarrassed, Anastasia wanted to leave several times, but Lily stopped her.

Lily told her that these were normal reactions to the medicine and she did not need to feel embarrassed.

Besides, Lily had to observe Anastasia to make sure she was okay before she could make further adjustments to her prescription.

Anastasia had asked her if she should try the bean prescription given by Austin, but Lily did not allow her, saying that it might clash with hers.

However, if she wanted to, she could try it after finishing Lily's prescription.

Fully trusting Lily now, Anastasia, however, had given up that idea.

Stepping out of the toilet for the last time, she felt drained and sweating, like she had taken a hot bath.

As the weather was not too warm, she thought she was simply too tired.

“will I...get dehydrated?”

She touched her stomach suspiciously.

She used to have diarrhea when she took some dubious weight loss medicine.

Once, it was so severe that she became dehydrated and got put on IV drips in the hospital, where the doctor scolded her for messing with her health.

She did not want to repeat that experience this time.

“No, you're physically weak and suffering from fluid retention, so it's normal reaction. Does your stomach hurt a lot?” Lily asked seriously.

Anastasia carefully tried to feel if there was any pain and shook her head.

Different from the last time, it indeed was not painful, despite the rumbling in her intestines.

“Then you’ll be fine. When you’re home, drink a lot of water and rest well. However, don’t drink before sleeping as you will have edema. Come back tomorrow as well. If you take the prescription for five days, your problem should be less severe.”

She had personally selected, cleaned, and brewed the herbs she got from Dominic’s garden, and if Anastasia took the prescription for five days, she should be able to rid her body of the toxins.

However, feeling unsafe at home and having no one to discuss it with, she thought it was better not to let Anastasia know about it and only told her that it was a prescription to strengthen her health.

“When Anastasia manages to detoxify most of her toxins after five days, she would only need to take her meals according to my diet plan. I could then go to Burnwken without worrying about her.”

For the past two days, she had not received any news from Alexander and could not stop worrying.

However, there were too many things to do, and she had to finish solving them before putting her mind at ease and going there.

After seeing Anastasia off, Lily tidied things up and went upstairs.

She saw her son asleep, and Daisy was putting the blanket on him.

The nanny then gently lifted his hands and tucked the blanket around him.

“Ma’am...”

Seeing her, Daisy wanted to say something, but Lily silenced her with a hand gesture.

Lily smoothed the blanket, then straightened up and walked to the doorway.

Looking back, she switched off the light but did not shut the door.

Daisy and Galen slept in the same room, with him on a bigger bed, while she used the smaller bed beside it.

This way, she could better take care of him, and he wouldn’t be scared if he woke up at night.

However, Lily now feels a bit scared in hindsight.

Daisy's background was still a mystery, yet she had allowed such a person to stay by his side.

Although the woman had not had tried to harm him, no one could guarantee what she would do later.
