

Chapter 1747 Locked Them In The Cabin

The captain couldn't stand the fact that Trevor was so calm right now.

He was puzzled. He had just pointed a gun at Trevor with the intention to rob him, yet Trevor was unfazed. How come?

Rupert stepped forward and shouted angrily, "You're shameless."

Rupert's words irritated the captain. Frowning tightly, the captain turned around and slapped Rupert hard across the face. "Shut up! Damn it!" the captain roared.

Trevor took the opportunity and quickly stepped forward and grabbed the captain's wrist.

Faced with Trevor's provocation, the captain turned livid. He took out his pistol and questioned fiercely, "Do you want to die?"

To the captain's shock, Trevor didn't panic at all. Instead, he said calmly, "You said you were planning to take our organs, right? You are doing all this for money! Well, if you hurt us and accidentally damage our organs, would that still have any value?"

Hearing that, the captain snorted and said arrogantly, "Our business isn't limited to just you people, and we can still do it even whenever we want. So we won't mind killing one of you."

Trevor smiled playfully and replied, "I'm sure Black Gold Union won't be able to survive Mobius attack this time. You won't have anyone to protect you in the future. I guess this is your last easy business. You don't want to lose money now, do you?"

Before the captain could answer, his crew members quickly chimed in.

The captain had no absolute power over the crew since they just came together for this specific job.

The crew felt Trevor's analysis was reasonable.

So, they all persuaded the captain. "There's no need to lose your temper with him. Anyway, we'll sell him when the ship docks. The only thing we have to worry about now is that the money we earn from this job will be enough for us to live peacefully for the rest of our lives. Don't mess things up. By the way, it's ominous to kill on a ship."

Naturally, the captain wouldn't want to alienate his crew. So he tucked his pistol back under his belt and sniffled coldly.

"Stay here and watch the cabin door! Don't let anyone of them out!" the captain ordered the crew.

With that, he left in anger. The cabin door was firmly guarded by the crew so that none would escape.

At this time, the association members were so scared their faces were all pale.

Now, all their hopes were on Trevor and they all scrambled to ask for help.

"Sir... Please find a way to save us. Once we are out of this nightmare, we will definitely repay you!"

Trevor waved his hand calmly and said with a smile, "Don't worry. Someone will come to save us."

However, the association members were still very nervous and wondered who could come to save them.

Trevor just smiled and didn't say anything.

After all, he couldn't let them know he was working for the Klein organization.

On the other side, Rupert who was standing at a corner, frowned and looked terrible. He kept silent for a long time. Then, he suddenly walked to the sailor who guarded the door and tried to negotiate.

he suddenly walked to the sailor who guarded the door and tried to negotiate.

"I hear all you want is money, right? Well, how about you mutiny and tie up the captain? Take us ashore safely and I promise to give you a handsome reward!"

The sailor was not in the very least tempted by Rupert's offer. Instead, he gave Rupert a hard slap and roared, "Stay there as you were told! If you keep talking nonsense, I'll chop off your fingers!"

Distraught, Rupert sat down sulkily on the floor, his head bowed. He murmured, "I'm sorry. It's all my fault."

At this time, the association members began to discuss among themselves.

Some of them didn't blame him at all. After all, he did his best to find them a way out of Glareder.

However, some of them felt that if he had been more careful, they wouldn't have been in this terrible situation right now. They even made hateful reproaches to him.

Trevor's face was cold as he listened to these people's reproaches. The world was really filled with ungrateful people.

Fed up with all these heinous remarks, Trevor waved his hand, indicating everyone to be quiet. Then, he announced loudly, "You should all rest. Rest assured, nothing will happen to you and you will return home safely. I promise you."

All the association members were still skeptical, but they didn't say anything more.

Trevor's voice was so loud the crew heard him clearly. They all laughed at him.

"What a braggart. I'll see if you'll still be so calm when we cut your kidney."

Trevor ignored the man.

In fact, if it weren't for the fact that he didn't know how to sail a ship, he would have cut their kidneys himself.

Chapter 1747 Locked Them In The Cabin

 +120 Points at most

The crew's cold threat sent chills down the members' spine, and they were even more scared now.

Trevor on the other hand, lay down to sleep. Soon, he was sleeping soundly.

The crew wanted to laugh at Trevor again, but they found that he was asleep.

They were dumbfounded.

They had been in human trafficking for so many years, but it was the first time they had seen someone who didn't panic at all when he was about to be sold.

100.0%

15:12

Commented [Ma1]:

Commented [Ma2R1]: