

Chapter 1776 The Mayor, Ernest Hughes

Mateo was dumfounded when he read the message.

All of the company's senior executives knew that the CFO had worked for the Singh Group for a long time.

Now, he wanted to leave!

Mateo was very curious to know the reason. However, he did not dare to ask. He just replied, "Okay, I'll contact him!"

Meanwhile, Trevor was in high spirits. He narrowed his eyes and analyzed the situation in his heart.

If he managed to successfully acquire the shares of the CFO, then he would have almost as much shares as the biggest shareholder in the company.

At that time, he could contact a few more small shareholders and buy off their shares. Then, he would be the biggest shareholder.

Just like that, he would be the new chairman of the Singh Group!

When that happened, he would have complete control of the company, and Tucker's little power plays behind the scenes would be useless.

It would even be impossible for Collen to be the CEO then.

The situation was really getting better for Trevor.

Trevor knew the only game-changer was the amusement park project.

He thought for a while and said to himself, "As long as I can stop Collen from demolishing the orphanage and launching the amusement park project before I buy the shares, the Singh Group will have a new owner!"

Collen had already tried twice to demolish the orphanage by force, but Trevor intervened and Collen failed each time.

Now, Collen also realized that with Trevor and Mateo watching him closely, he definitely couldn't forcibly tear down the orphanage.

The first solution he came up with was to get the approval of the city mayor, Ernest Hughes.

Coincidentally, Ernest, who had been absent from Zayden for a while, happened to come back recently and he granted Collen an interview.

When Trevor learned that the mayor had agreed to meet Collen, he immediately guessed what the meeting would be about. Trevor thus decided to pay a visit to the mayor, in order to make sure Ernest wouldn't agree to Collen's request.

When Trevor first heard the name "Ernest" the day before, he felt the name was familiar.

But he couldn't remember where or under what circumstances he heard that name.

With a slight frown, Trevor directly went to Ernest's place.

If he really knew the mayor, he would remember where they had met the moment he saw Ernest.

On the other side.

Collen also left early and went to the mayor's office.

He had inquired about the mayor's hobbies and preferences, and so he knew the mayor's love for antiques.

So, the day before, Collen bought an overpriced blue and white porcelain calabash bowl at an auction in Dreles. This antique was worth thirty million dollars.

Collen took the antique with him and intended to give it as a present to Ernest. He thus hoped to bribe the mayor in order to obtain special authorization to demolish the orphanage.

It had to be said that the antique was of excellent quality.

When later at the mayor's office, Ernest stood up and looked intently at the antique he held in his hand. You could tell from Ernest's smiling face that he really liked the gift. The mayor said with an undisguised smile, "It's indeed a rare and exquisite antique."

At this moment, Trevor was also in the mayor's office. He came here as an employee of the Singh Group.

When Collen turned around and saw Trevor, he was stunned to say the least. He cursed Trevor angrily in his heart.

What the hell was he doing there? Did Trevor want to spoil his good plan again?

Standing in front of the office door with a long face, Collen sneered at Trevor, "What are you doing here? Do you think a no-name like you deserves to see the mayor? Fuck off!"

Trevor simply raised a brow and completely ignored Collen. Instead, he glanced at Ernest who was inside the room.

Ernest seemed hesitant about who to let in.

However, he and Trevor looked at each other for a moment, and then both of them could not help but smile.

Ernest was actually a member of the association formed by fugitives from Mobius prison.

They were able to escape from Mobius with Trevor's help.

Trevor suddenly remembered the man.

No wonder the name sounded so familiar. It had not been long since they parted ways.

There were a lot of people in the association at the time, and the situation in Glareder was total chaos. So it was understandable that Trevor couldn't remember everyone's name.

Ernest was very happy to see that the man who saved his life came to visit him. He was so excited that he had a big smile on his face.

Seeing that the mayor was an acquaintance of his, Trevor looked at Collen with a smirk.
