

Chapter 1909 Curtis Deliberately Put Obstacles In...

Curtis, after some thought, announced loudly, "The Craig family is holding this banquet not just to celebrate the formal opening of the biological medicine company but also to find qualified dealers. However, before we begin, we should let those who aren't qualified leave!"

Curtis turned to Trevor and said, "I know this man. He goes by the name Raven. He used to be a security guard, but now he is here, attending the banquet. I don't know how he got an invitation, but he is an upstart. He is not qualified to be a partner of the Craig family. I think we should let this kind of person leave before we continue with our talk about the partnership."

Trevor had known that Curtis would attempt to make things difficult for him. However, he did nothing other than stare indifferently at him.

Curtis continued his speech.

"Ladies and gentlemen I don't think an upstart such as him is fit to be in our midst. He would only bring us down to his level. I'll advise that you all should abstain from any cooperation with him in Clouauro."

Several of the wealthy men who were desperate to become suppliers for the Craig family willingly agreed.

"There's sense in what Mr. Craig has said. It's an embarrassment to partner with such a person. We will never have any business with the likes of him."

Luisa, angry at this reaction, said angrily, "I didn't know the businessmen in Clouauro were so impolite. Raven is a major shareholder in Newmere Cosmetics. He really doesn't care if you partner with him or not."

Curtis hurriedly retorted, "I've never heard of Newmere Cosmetics. Has anyone here heard of it? It must be an unknown company."

Luisa scoffed at him and continued, "You really are ignorant. Raven is also the largest shareholder of Severich, and he also owns several assets of the Sanderson family in Zayden."

This information caused an uproar in the crowd. Newmere Cosmetics was not well-known, and only a few people had heard of it.

Severich, on the other hand, was quite popular. It was a well-known company under the Singh Group.

It wasn't long ago that the Severich acquisition case had been widely circulated in the business world.

What was more surprising to all present was that he held property belonging to the Sanderson family.

The wealthy businessmen who had previously spoken immediately realized their mistake.

"We spoke in ignorance. Please forgive us."

Trevor said nothing. He just stared at Curtis, waiting to see his next move.

Curtis just gazed, disbelief written clearly on his face.

They all believed Raven's lies.

Luisa was naive enough to believe such nonsense, but he wouldn't be cheated.

How could a security guard hold property belonging to the Sanderson family?

He stared coldly at Trevor and asked, "Answer me this in front of everyone. Have you ever been a security guard?"

Trevor thought about it for a while. He had disguised himself as a security guard to protect Luisa. That was nothing to be ashamed of. Calmly, he answered, "Yes, I was. What about it?"

Curtis burst into laughter.

"A security guard is not qualified to attend the Craig family banquet."

The wealthy businessmen were confused at this point. They didn't know whether Trevor actually held assets belonging to the Sanderson family.

It did seem impossible for a security guard to hold assets belonging to one of the three great families.

They hesitated, not knowing whether to continue with their apology.