

Chapter 1920 Abduct Luisa

Curtis listened intently to the master's words. Though uncertain of the outcome, he confidently said, "Rest assured! This time, I won't mess up."

Finishing his declaration, Curtis promptly sought out Ewing, instructing him, "Get in touch with Connie immediately, tell her to devise a plan to draw Luisa out."

Ewing, caught off guard, hesitated.

Luisa was the beloved of the man who had once saved him. Gathering his thoughts, he whispered, "Why, Curtis, are you targeting Luisa?"

Clearly irritated, Curtis replied curtly, "Enough questions! Just follow the order."

Raven's challenging our Craigs; he needs to be set straight."

Confusion clouded Ewing's judgment, but after some contemplation, he called Connie, informing her, "Connie, did you hear about Luisa's amnesia? I need you to bring her to my family's residence."

Connie hesitated momentarily, then questioned with a hint of doubt, "Why? Do you plan on taking advantage of her now that she has suffered memory loss?"

Before Ewing could respond, Curtis snatched the phone, clarifying, "Miss Archer, there's been a misunderstanding. It was my request, not his. Luisa and Raven are treacherous. They'll pay for crossing the Craigs."

Upon learning of Luisa's condition, Connie felt an urge to seek vengeance on Trevor. She mulled it over before agreeing, "Fine, I'll see to it that she's brought there."

With this agreement, Curtis's disdain for the Archers grew even more profound.

He believed he now had the leverage to topple the Archer dynasty. Such a feat would surely please the Craig patriarch, enhancing Curtis's chances of succession.

Meanwhile, Connie discreetly left her confined space, finding Luisa while Braden and Jeffry were preoccupied with company finances.

At the same juncture, Trevor was attending to Alden at the Navarro residence. It was a stroke of fate that he wasn't with Luisa.

Approaching cautiously, Connie asked, "Luisa, do you recognize me?"

Luisa gazed at her, confusion evident, and slowly shook her head.

This only solidified Connie's belief in Luisa's memory loss.

After a brief conversation, it became clear that Luisa had forgotten much of her past in Clouauro.

For a moment, Connie wove a web of deceit, saying, "Luisa, believe it or not, I'm your closest friend. You should know that Raven's been dishonest with you. His constant presence isn't out of affection. He's got ulterior motives! If you linger here any longer, I fear you might face harm. Or worse, you might even lose your virginity!"

Luisa, muddled and vulnerable, hung on every word.

She had hazy memories of the incident in Dreles. With Trevor's whereabouts unknown then, her anxiety for him grew. Almost desperate, she asked, "So, what's my next step? I need to find Trevor, my fiancé. Can you guide me to him?"

Spotting an opportunity, Connie's spirits soared. Capitalizing on Luisa's trust, she said, "Let me lead you to the Craigs. Rumor has it Trevor's been meeting with them for a potential partnership. Chances are, he's there."

Deprived of her memories and in her vulnerable state, Luisa grasped at the offered straw of hope. She affirmed eagerly, "Alright, let's head there without delay."

And with that, Luisa took the keys from Connie and drove off to the Craig residence in Connie's vehicle.