

Chapter 1923 A Note To Herself

On the other side, Curtis had calmed down and thought the matter over.

Luisa was now dating that stinky bodyguard, Raven, right? That meant she had cheated on the eldest son of the Sanderson family, Trevor.

So, since she was sleeping with another man, it didn't matter if he slept with her too, did it? Trevor had no reason to go after him.

Thinking of this, Curtis' worries completely vanished.

He then decided to deceive Luisa into sleeping with him.

But since Luisa already doubted Curtis was Trevor as he claimed, she didn't give in and instead made excuses.

"Slow down. I need to take a shower first," she said.

Curtis' mind was in a mess right now.

His whole body was hot and he couldn't help thinking how it would feel like making love to her later.

After entering the bathroom, Luisa noticed a line of words written on her arm.

"My name is Luisa, and I am Trevor's fiancée."

This was her handwriting.

There was no doubt that she had written it.

It was only a few words, but it was enough to remind her who she loved.

She remembered that she had written the message on the inside of her arm because she was afraid of forgetting Trevor due to her amnesia.

But the issue was that she couldn't tell whether Curtis was the real Trevor or not.

Her mind was in a mess. She simply washed her face and walked out of the bathroom.

When she saw Curtis after walking out of the bathroom, she looked at him with a complicated expression and asked, "What's the nature of our relationship now?"

Curtis didn't think much and blurted out, "Of course you are my girlfriend! Baby, let's go to bed now! I'm so sleepy."

Luisa immediately found out the flaw in Curtis' words, and a cold light flashed through her eyes.

Curtis almost deceived her.

But now she had the confirmation that he was not Trevor at all!

The thing was, she clearly knew that she and Trevor were engaged. That meant Trevor must have proposed to her.

If Curtis was really Trevor, he couldn't have forgotten it.

Curtis was so engrossed in his fantasies that he didn't notice the change in Luisa's attitude. He still walked over to her with burning desire in his eyes, trying to grope Luisa and feel her perfect body.

All of a sudden, Curtis felt a huge force.

Luisa grabbed him and threw him away like he was a puppet.

The two of them were shocked.

Luisa looked at her hands in disbelief.

How could she be so strong?

When she eventually came to her senses, she remembered that she was still at the Craig family's. It would be very dangerous for her to directly confront Curtis. She smiled awkwardly and explained, "I uh... I'm not ready yet. I'm a little afraid. You won't blame me, would you?"

Blood flowed from the corner of Curtis' mouth, and he hurt all over. The pain was unbearable.

He thought that maybe Luisa wasn't so easy to deal with after all and the fact that she had just lost her memory didn't make her any more docile. It would take time for him to make her love him. Thinking of this, Curtis nodded and forced a smile and said, "Alright. I'll come to see you later. Have a good rest."

When he walked out of Luisa's room, a surprised smile appeared on his face and he fell into deep thought.

The semi-finished drug from his family's biological pharmacy company had yet to show promising effects on humans, but it worked on Luisa perfectly.

Otherwise, how could a weak woman throw him away so easily? It was too shocking.

Luisa was invaluable to the research in his lab. He would hand her over to the lab once he was done with her. She must be useful.

He was sure that he would make a good impression on the patriarch if he managed to achieve good results.
