

Chapter 1946 Construction Team

The construction crew flared up in anger at the sight of Kurt. They waved their fists and shouted at the top of their lungs, "Pay back our money! Pay back our money! You owe us a whole year's salary. You must pay back our money today!"

"Your company and you yourself have no morals whatsoever! Pay me back what you owe me! My mother is waiting for the money for her surgery!"

"My salary would have allowed me to get married by now! But after a whole year without pay, my girlfriend got fed up and left with another man."

The workers shared their misfortunes with each other.

The longer the situation lasted, the more angry and aggressive these workers became.

At one point, some of them couldn't stand it any longer and they rushed towards Kurt to beat him up.

However, before they could get any closer, they were all stopped by the bodyguards Kurt had brought with him.

This wasn't Kurt's first time to come to the company, so he knew very well how important it was for him to bring bodyguards along every time he came here.

With all the bad things he had done, he had to be protected at all times, otherwise those whom he had offended would lynch him at the first opportunity.

At this time, Trevor also turned his head to look at the man everybody was shouting at. Seeing the complacent look on Kurt's face, Trevor said disdainfully, "I can't cooperate with such an unscrupulous company. If you can't even pay your workers' salaries, there is no doubt that you must be bad in other aspects as well."

Trevor's words didn't make Kurt angry at all. On the contrary, Kurt laughed heartily and sneered, "You are so naive if you think you can look down on my company. Since you feel it is beneath you to cooperate with us, I will instruct all the construction companies in Dreles to refuse to cooperate with you! Just wait and see!"

Upon hearing that, Trevor frowned. "I can understand that you want to take revenge on me, but why don't you pay your workers? They work hard for you every day, but you don't even give them their money! Why?"

Hearing that, Kurt laughed and scoffed, "So what if I don't pay their salaries? I just do it to help the company make some savings. That is equivalent to making a profit! I won't give a penny to these workers who came here to ask for money. Moreover, they will be blacklisted by all the construction companies in Dreles. I will let them know the consequences of offending me."

Trevor sneered and decided to ignore Kurt. He turned to the disgruntled construction team and said calmly, "I'm setting up a construction team to repair my villa. I wonder if you are willing to join my team. You will be well paid. I can guarantee you that you will never have a delay in receiving your salary as you do in other companies."

Hearing Trevor's words, the labor contractor was so excited that he nodded repeatedly and said gratefully, "Are you serious? Thank you so much! You know, we are almost running out of money! If possible, we would be glad to start the construction as soon as possible so as to make money as soon as possible."

Trevor nodded and reassured them. "Don't worry. I will give you two months' salary in advance. Additionally, I will help you find a team of the best attorneys there are to help you obtain compensation from this company. He must not only pay your salary arrears, but also compensate you for the moral pain he has inflicted on you."

The labor contractor was so moved that he burst into tears. He held Trevor's hand tightly and said sincerely, "Thank you!"

All the workers looked gratefully at Trevor. Kurt, on the other hand, was not happy at all. He broke out in curses, "You are all traitors! How dare you betray the company? I will make you suffer! Let's wait and see!"
