

Chapter 1951 A Strange Hacker Attack

---

Henrik's thoughts were clouded by the frequent mishaps plaguing the hotel under his management.

Initially, he blamed his own inadequacies.

Now, he suspected foul play.

It seemed increasingly plausible that Duran's disruptions stemmed from a puppeteer's orders. From the onset, it was apparent that Duran's intentions went beyond proving his superiority over the direct descendants; his aim was to obliterate Henrik. His goal was to annihilate every direct descendant.

Henrik, having unraveled this plot, was seething with anger. He conveyed the hotel's dire straits to Trevor.

"Of late, unknown hackers have repeatedly targeted our hotel's network, subjecting us to extortion and crippling our security systems. The network disruption occurring nearly every thirty minutes, has elicited numerous complaints from our guests. My only recourse has been to offer discounts or waive their charges altogether.

This situation cannot persist, so I have enlisted some top-tier hackers for a counter-offensive. Yet, their efforts have been futile! They struggle to accurately identify and attribute anonymous cyber-attacks."

Trevor, deep in thought, was astonished.

If the elite hackers employed by Henrik failed to address the issue, the adversary's prowess must be formidable!

To console Henrik, he said, "Luisa and I are heading back to the hotel for some rest. I'll examine this issue later. Hang in there. We'll find a way out."

Henrik expressed his gratitude with a nod, and the trio proceeded to the hotel.

Luisa, still needing recuperation, retired to her room immediately, leaving Trevor and Henrik to delve into the hotel's plight.

Henrik guided Trevor to the hackers he had commissioned.

In an office, a group of frustrated hackers huddled together, pondering the problem but at a loss for solutions.

Henrik gestured towards Trevor and introduced him, "Everyone, meet my friend Trevor. He is here to assist. Please update him on the current situation."

The hackers, however, greeted Trevor with skepticism. Perceiving his presence as a sign of Henrik's mistrust, one of them retorted sarcastically, "Mr. Wright, I doubt we need him. I, Top Hacker, am known for my hacking skills in Dreles. I single-handedly breached Dreles' bank system, halting operations for a full fifteen seconds! If I'm struggling with this predicament, what help could another person possibly offer? Moreover, there are no hints of their intrusions or vulnerabilities!"

The other hackers murmured in agreement, clearly recognizing the one named "Top Hacker" as their leader.

After all, hacking into one of the most secure systems — the bank — even for just fifteen seconds, was no minor feat.

Those fifteen seconds could wreak financial havoc on the bank!

Trevor, focused solely on unraveling the mystery, disregarded Top Hacker's dismissive attitude.

He was internally taken aback.

If this hacker wasn't exaggerating his skills, the inability to trace the attacks was puzzling. The situation was becoming increasingly bizarre.